FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

The Military Air Transport Service

BY MAJ. GEN. JOSEPH SMITH, USAF
Commander, Military Air Transport Service

MATS was formed 1 June 1948 as the result of a directive issued by the Secretary of Defense. It was created as an integrated command, composed of Air Force and Navy elements, to provide a single air transport system in air logistic support of the Department of Defense. The merger marked the first time in U.S. military history that two separate services were integrated into one permanent organization.

Less than two months after MATS was established, the newly-integrated Service was called upon to play a major support role in the Berlin Airlift—the most dramatic demonstration of peacetime air power in the history of world aviation. It was then that the air route command concept conceived by top air planners proved successful. Then, too, came the true test of "unification."

Two years later, almost to the day, we were faced with the Pacific Airlift. Within a few days after the North Korean Communists pushed past the 38th Parallel on 25 June 1950, MATS set in motion a 7,000 mile strategic air supply line—the longest in the history of world aviation.

It was then that our Berlin experience paid off not only in transport know-how but in the other technical aviation fields such as communications, weather and air rescue. There was smooth and speedy expansion of MATS Air Weather Service, Airways and Air Communications Service, and Air Rescue Service. Rescue and air evacuation techniques were perfected under actual combat conditions.

In the setting up of this vast airlift the air route command concept, conceived by top military men, reached full fruition—and success.

With full control over both its Air Force and Navy elements, MATS was able to marshal its resources overnight. Pacific Division planes were utilized immediately to air funnel men and material in support of the United Nations action. To a lesser extent MATS Continental and Atlantic Divisions directly or indirectly were called upon to support the Pacific Airlift.

Prior to the Korean conflict, MATS planes had flown an average 70 tons a month to the Far East using fewer than 60 Douglas C-54 Skymasters in its Pacific Division.

Immediately after the North Korean attack, MATS diverted 40 four-engine transports from its Continental and Atlantic Divisions. Two Troop Carrier groups, the 61st in Germany and the 62d at Kelly AFB, Texas, were assigned to MATS Pacific Airlift. Troop Carrier aircraft were assigned the short but difficult air route through Alaska from

Restudy of Pensions Urged by President

Two bills granting modest increases in payments to veterans and to widows and children of veterans were signed by President Truman on 23 May.

The President said, however, that he approved the measures with "great reluctance" and that he "would not have done so if there were available any other practical means of lessening economic pressures upon these veterans and their dependents who have come to rely on pensions as their chief means of support."

In a message to Congress, President Truman urged that they authorize a thorough study of "our veterans' benefit programs and their relationships with our social insurance and other general-welfare programs."

In his message the President said: "There was no social-security system, when the veterans' pension laws were passed. When the social-security law was enacted, in 1935, the world was at peace and the fact that we were establishing a basic economic security system alongside the existing benefit program for veterans seemed comparatively unimportant. Little attention was paid to the 839,000 cases receiving pension and compensation from the Veterans' Administration in 1935, and since then no major steps have been taken to integrate and relate the two systems of benefits."

"I have pointed out several times in the past my belief that our first obligation to

AF Officer Promotions

The Air Force selection board recommending officers for temporary promotion to captain and major has adjourned after completing its deliberations at the Pentagon.

The names of officers selected and those named by the major commands are undergoing administrative checking.

It is likely that the Air Force will release simultaneously the names of officers selected for temporary promotions to colonel, lieutenant colonel, major and captain. At first, it had been planned to release the names of the colonels and lieutenant colonels separately, but indications this week were that all names would be made public at the same time, probably about the middle of June.

Korean Vets Bill

A new "GI Bill of Rights" for Korean veterans has been unanimously approved this week by the House Veterans Committee. It provides up to 36 months of free schooling, a maximum of $300 in mustering-out pay, and loan guarantees on homes, farms and businesses.

All personnel in uniform between 27 June 1950 and a date to be established later by the President or Congress, would be eligible for the benefits if they receive other than dishonorable discharges. Unlike its World War II counterpart, the proposed legislation makes no unemployment compensation provisions.

Congress Will Ask Pay Amendment Bill

The Department of Defense will be asked to prepare for Congressional action early next year an omnibus bill of amendments to the Career Compensation Act.

Such a measure was first slated for action during the last session of Congress, was scheduled again for the current session, but was dropped when the cost-of-living pay legislation came under consideration.

Meantime, the House Armed Services Committee has yet to schedule promised hearings on combat pay legislation. In passing the cost-of-living pay raise bill, the Senate voted a $45 monthly combat pay provision, which was eliminated in conference action on the understanding that the House committee would hold hearings on the measure, first introduced in January 1951. Late this week, there were indications that a subcommittee headed by Representative Overton Brooks (D-La.) might begin hearings shortly.

With Congress making every effort to adjourn as early as possible in an election year, chance of any action this year on the long-proposed omnibus bill of amendments is negligible and with the passing of each day, combat pay is jeopardized also.

Capitol Hill sources told THE JOURNAL that the Pentagon will be asked to make recommendations to remedy pay inequalities in time for consideration early in the new Congress, which will convene in January 1953.

This information was disclosed as thousands of men and women in uniform this week received the first evidence of the 4-14 per cent pay hike, which went into effect on 1 May.

Because the pay bill was not signed by the President until 19 May, the increase will not be reflected in the pay of many persons until the end of June.

As has been reported previously, finance officials of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey and Public Health Service have acted with great dispatch in transmitting instructions to the field.

Following telegraphic messages to the field, the Army released, under date of 20 May, Circular No. 41 describing details of the Armed Forces Pay Raise Act.

One major problem likely to receive Congressional study next year is the fact that in many cases military personnel promoted from the top enlisted pay grade to warrant officer, junior grade, suffer a loss in pay. It had been hoped Congress would do something about this matter during the current session, but no action has been forthcoming.

Possibly, with months in which to formulate an omnibus bill of amendments, the Pentagon will take action during the summer and fall to insure that legislation is ready to go when the new Congress meets in January 1953.

Patrols and Tanks Busy in West Front

Sharp fighting between patrols in the west and tank action on the west central front, with relative quiet in the east, marked land operations in Korea during much of this week.

Allied Naval vessels pounded dock installations and transport facilities along the east coast of North Korea, and supported a highly successful South Korean guerrilla raid on the Ongjin Peninsula on the west coast, in which 300 of the enemy were reported killed. Two United States minesweepers were hit and slightly damaged by enemy shore guns near Songjin, on the east coast.

In the air American fighter planes shot down five enemy jets and damaged another in Northwest Korea on Sunday 25 May. In another encounter on Tuesday, 27 May, one enemy MIG was shot down and another damaged. An American B-26 light bomber attacked and probably destroyed a Red night fighter plane.

The Far East Air Force reported that during the week ending 23 May the enemy for the first time in the Korean War bagged more planes in air combat than did the Allies. Red MIGs during last week shot down three American F-86 Sabre Jets and two F-84 Thunder Jets. In addition seven other Allied land-based planes were lost to enemy ground fire and other causes during the week. This loss summary does not include Allied carrier-based planes, at least two of which were lost during the week. Four Red MIGs were shot down during the week.

Despite heavy plane losses, the Far East Air Force was well pleased with results of last week's air operations, particularly the destruction of the huge enemy supply and manufacturing center at Kiyang, between Pyongyang, the North Korean capital, and Chinnampo, the important west coast port.

In a three-day air attack which began on Thursday, 22 May, 425 buildings in the area were reported destroyed and 150 others damaged. Pilots flying the last of 800 sorties against the base reported that little more than the walls of some of the buildings was left after the sustained and concentrated attack, in which many tons of high explosives and jellied gasoline were rained on the center, effecting vast destruction of military supplies.

In a revival of Communist guerrilla activity in South Korea a lightly manned American station only seven miles from Pusan was raided by Red irregulars and two machineguns, small arms and quantities of ammunition were captured. The surprise raid, which occurred at midnight, was apparently for the purpose of securing weapons and ammunition. There were several American casualties, but enemy losses are not known. After seizing some guns and ammunition the Reds withdrew.

On the battle line on the western front the fiercest fighting occurred when two reinforced enemy companies attacked an advance United Nations position west of Chorwon. The enemy assault was preceded and supported by 2,300 rounds of mortar and artillery fire. The battle began shortly after midnight and continued for more than four hours, the enemy being finally forced to withdraw. Twenty-nine enemy dead were counted, and it is estimated that 65 Reds were wounded in the action.

East of Panmunjom there was a brief fight between patrols. Another patrol encounter north of Korangpo-ri lasted an hour and 20 minutes, during which several of the enemy were killed. Northwest of Chorwon an Allied patrol engaged two enemy platoons and withdrew after a brief fight. One portion of the patrol covering the withdrawal was pinned down for an hour until reinforcements aided it to disengage.

Allied troops at an outpost northwest of Yonchon repulsed a probing attack by the enemy after a brief fight. Later the Red attack was renewed and the United Nations unit withdrew to permit placing artillery fire on the enemy, which routed the Reds and enabled the Allies to re-occupy the position. Two enemy squads attacked another outpost northwest of Yonchon and were forced to withdraw after a skirmish lasting an hour.

On the west central front United Nations tanks destroyed numerous bunkers, trenches, and gun emplacements in the Kumwha and Pyonggang areas. One group of tanks ran into artillery, mortar, and anti-tank fire from an enemy-held hill. Two air strikes were placed on the hill and silenced the enemy fire.

United Nations troops at an advance position west of the Pukhan River threw back a dawn attack by three Chinese platoons in 90 minutes of fighting. A small enemy unit probed an advance Allied position southeast of Kumsong, but was forced to withdraw after a brief fire-fight.

Two enemy units of undetermined strength fired on United Nations positions west of the Punch Bowl in a night attack. Defensive small arms, automatic weapons, and tank fire forced them to withdraw after a fight lasting an hour. Two enemy squads probed an Allied outpost near the Satae-ri Valley in a night attack and were repulsed in a brief fight. Allied patrols along the eastern front fought brief engagements with small enemy groups throughout much of the week.

Allied warships bombarded both coasts of Korea during the week registering destructive hits on docks, cranes, rail lines, shore gun positions, and transport facilities. Carrier-based planes pounded lines of communications, gun emplacements, and troop concentrations, causing heavy destruction and inflicting many troop casualties.

Two United States Navy minesweepers, the Murrelet and the Swallow, were hit by enemy short batteries while operating off the port of Songjin on the east coast. Neither ship was seriously damaged. Allied vessels, led by the U. S. Battleship Iowa, bombarded port facilities along the east coast, destroying or damaging dock equipment and other enemy installations. On the west coast units of the Allied bombardment fleet supported a raid by South Korean guerrillas on enemy positions on the Ongjin Peninsula. It is estimated that 300 Reds were killed in the attack. Several prisoners were captured.

Land planes of the Far East Air Force and attached units continued their destructive strikes on enemy rail lines, marshalling yards, supply centers, and enemy frontline positions. Fighter-bombers ranged the rail lines by day and blasted enemy bases, while light and medium bombers attacked marshalling yards, vehicular traffic and front-line positions at night.

In air combats early this week five Red MIGs were shot down and two damaged, and an enemy night fighter was probably destroyed. The first series of air battles occurred on Sunday, 25 May, when American planes shot down four enemy MIGs and damaged another, in several encounters. Three American Sabre Jets first engaged two enemy jets near the Yalu River. The Red planes retreated to Manchuria and there were no claims of damage. Later four Sabres encountered a Red jet and shot it down. In a third engagement 10 Sabres clashed with two MIGs in the Anju area, destroying one of them. Near the Yalu River two other Red planes were encountered and one was shot down. In the final fight of the day nine F-86s destroyed a MIG and damaged another in the Chinnampo area.

On Tuesday in another encounter one MIG was shot down and another was damaged. In a night fight an American B-26 light bomber took on an enemy night fighter and probably destroyed it.

Light and medium bombers and fighter-bombers of the Far East Air Force penetrated deep into enemy territory in round-the-clock attacks on enemy rail lines, highway traffic, and supply installations, while other Allied planes hit hard at enemy front-line positions in close support of United Nations ground troops.

American F-80 Shooting Stars, F-84 Thunder Jets and conventional F-51 Mustangs joined in cutting rail lines from Sakchu south to Kusong. They also concentrated attacks on a short stretch of track between Sinanju and Sukchon. Thunder Jets attacked a marshalling yard south of Sukchon, destroying a number of box cars. Still other F-84s hit targets in the Chaeryon and Chinnampo areas. F-51 Mustangs cut rails east of Haeju and destroyed a number of buildings in the Yonan area.

Marine Corsairs teamed with South Korean Mustangs and Australian Meteor jets to cut rails and destroy supply buildings in the Sariwon, Haeju and Yonan areas.

In close air support missions Shooting Stars, Thunder Jets and Mustangs, directed by T-6 Mosquito observation planes, pounded enemy front-line troops along the 150-mile battle line across the peninsula, knocking out artillery pieces, mortar positions, trenches and bunkers, and inflicting many casualties.

American B-29 medium bombers from Japan and Okinawa used electronic techniques in night attacks on the rail bridge complex at Kwaksan, and on bridges at Sinhung. Hundreds of tons of high explosives were dropped in these night attacks. Moderate flak was reported over the target and enemy planes were sighted but did not attack. Other Superforts struck the Hamhung marshalling yard and front-line positions.

Marine aircraft and B-26 light bombers made night attacks on enemy vehicular traffic along North Korean highways. In one night 160 enemy trucks were destroyed, one of the largest bags of the war. The B-26s also attacked a locomotive and a number of rail cars south of Hamhung, but were unable to observe results.

The Far East Air Force in its weekly summary for the seven-day period ending 23 May announced that during the week its planes and those of attached units flew 6,380 sorties. Three F-86s and two F-84s were lost in air combat during the week and four enemy MIG-15s were shot down, marking the first week in which Allied losses in air battles exceeded those of the enemy. In addition two F-82s and two F-51s were shot down by Red ground fire, one F-84 was lost from concussion following its own blast, and one F-84 and one Marine AD-2 were lost to undetermined causes. Ten pilots of downed Allied planes were rescued, including some carrier-based pilots.

Two BG's Lose Rank In Koje Island Prison Affair

Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, jr., has announced the demotion of Brig. Gen. Francis T. Dodd, USA, and Brig. Gen. Charles F. Colson, USA, to their permanent rank of colonel. The action is an aftermath of the disturbance at the Koje Island prison camp in Korea, in which General Dodd was captured by the prisoners and held as a hostage, and General Colson made certain concessions to the Reds in order to secure the release of General Dodd.

In addition the Secretary announced that Brig. Gen. Paul F. Yount, USA, head of the logistical command responsible for the control of the prison camps, had been reprimanded.

In a letter to Senator Richard B. Russell, (D-Ga.), Chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Mr. Pace said that the action was taken on the recommendation of General Mark W. Clark, USA, Commander-in-Chief of United Nations Forces in Korea. It was held that General Dodd as camp commandant had shown a lack of sound judgment in conferring with prisoners at the gates of their compounds, rather than having their representatives brought to his office under guard, thus presenting the Reds with an opportunity for seizing him, and providing the basis for the kid-

Text of Secretary Pace's Letter on Koje Island Prison Riot

Following is the text of the letter from Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, jr., to Senator Richard B. Russell, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, concerning the Koje Island prisoner of war situation.

"This constitutes the Army's report to you on the recent events at Koje Island. When first apprised of the capture of General Dodd and the subsequent 'ransom' terms for his release, the Chief of Staff and I were deeply shocked, as was the entire Army. In accordance with the established military and judicial practice, we felt it imperative to get the facts before taking any final action.

"Having complete confidence in General Clark's judgment, and in his resolution to take whatever appropriate action was called for, we asked him to move with greatest speed toward collecting the facts and making his recommendations to us. General Clark's recommendations have now been received. The Chief of Staff and his military staff have reviewed these recommendations and the Chief has recommended their approval. I have reviewed General Collins' recommendations. Therefore, I have taken the necessary steps to:

"a. Reduce Brig. Gen. Francis T. Dodd, who has been a temporary brigadier general, to the grade of colonel.

"b. Reduce Brig. Gen. Charles F. Colson, who has been a temporary general, to the grade of colonel.

"c. Direct General Clark to administer a reprimand to Brig. Gen. Paul F. Yount.

"d. Direct General Clark to take actions within the principles of the Geneva Convention, which principles have always been recognized and practiced by the United Nations Command, to insure against lawlessness and disorder on Koje Island.

"It is clear that the seizure of General Dodd was the result of a premeditated plot by the Communist prisoners on Koje Island. General Dodd showed a lack of sound judgment in establishing the practice of conferring with the prisoners of war at the gates of their compounds instead of having their representatives brought to his office under guard. This presented the Communists with the opportunity of seizing him and, thereby, furnished the basis for this most serious incident. He thus contributed to the creation of a situation which endangered the security of the camp, put his successor in an extremely difficult position and furnished the Communists with material for false world-wide propaganda, which material they could use to hamper armistice negotiations at Panmunjom. In his action, General Dodd did not display the judgment that is required of a general officer.

"Following General Dodd's seizure he was relieved of command and replaced by Brig. Gen. Charles F. Colson, who was ordered to secure the release of General Dodd, using force if necessary.

"General Colson faced a difficult situation.

He had been directed to use force, if necessary. The use of force would possibly have resulted in casualties among UN soldiers effecting his release, wide-spread bloodshed among the prisoners of war, as well as the probable death of General Dodd. He secured the release of General Dodd without creating the dangers indicated above. However, to accomplish this he made statements in writing to prisoners of war which permitted distortion and inference of violations of proper handling of prisoners on the part of UN authorities, which, in fact, did not exist.

"General Colson made certain reports during the negotiations to his immediate superior, Brig. Gen. Paul F. Yount, whose headquarters was on the mainland at Pusan. He obtained consent from General Yount to part of the proposed arrangements with the Communists' PW leaders, but his reports were incomplete and did not permit proper evaluation of the situation by higher headquarters. He failed to advise General Yount of the content of his final letter to the Communists, which contained false implications of UN practices. General Colson must bear responsibility for this letter and his actions on Koje Island.

"General Colson, by telephone, sought the advice of General Yount concerning his proposed reply to the Communists at various stages before final modifications. In approving an intermediate draft of the reply, General Yount overlooked the erroneous implications contained in such words as 'no more forcible screening' or 'any rearming of prisoners.' However, General Yount did not know of the contents of the letter in its final form before dispatch to the Communists. It was not possible for him to give full evaluation to its implications. He is being given an administrative reprimand.

"General Clark is taking action to insure that lawlessness and disorder do not exist on Koje Island. Within the last few days, the U. N. forces on the island have been augmented by the 187th Airborne Regiment and a tank battalion from the Eighth Army. "Barricades surrounding PW inclosures have been strengthened; road blocks constructed; additional troops deployed around sensitive areas, and security measures taken. In order to disperse the prisoners into groups of manageable size, we have initiated construction of new inclosures, each of which will be constructed on carefully selected sites, which will provide terrain advantage to U. N. security troops and will be sufficiently far apart to preclude communication between inclosures. It is anticipated that movement of the prisoners to the new inclosures will be accomplished during the next several weeks.

"In these new measures, as in all our past actions, the United States will continue to adhere to the principles of the Geneva Convention.

"I am sending this same letter to other committees which have inquired about these highly disturbing events at Koje Island."

Decline In Benefits Harmful To Services

Career officers of the Armed Forces are awaiting anxiously Senate action on the House-passed appropriations bill for fiscal year 1953 in hopes that discriminatory action will be rescinded. On the basis of recent performance, there is, however, little optimism.

In last week's issue of THE JOURNAL, a series of articles was begun to point up how the military man is being penalized and how, as a result, a military career is losing its attractiveness to the youth of the nation.

The initial article reported how concern is growing because of the increasing tendency on Capitol Hill to use hastily-adopted riders to appropriation legislation, safe from veto, to hit at benefits granted to military personnel only after careful Congressional consideration, including close scrutiny by appropriate committees.

Included as riders to the 1953 appropriations bill, as passed by the House, are restrictions on promotions, retirements and an arbitrary reduction in the amount of household goods which can be transported at Government expense upon permanent transfer.

As THE JOURNAL has reported, if the Senate agrees to the House limit on movement of household goods, many military personnel will be victims of an ex post facto action. This would be viewed in the Service as another evidence of a breach of contract by the Government.

There is great interest also in whether or not the Senate will vote to continue the ban on voluntary retirements, which its original sponsor now says is no longer necessary.

Food Costs Rise

Military personnel have come to know that a rider to an appropriations bill, normally effective for only one year, can mean permanent loss of benefits. For example, it was such a rider which forced the Army and Air Force to boost prices at commissaries by 5 per cent. This has meant, in effect, that in addition to the cost-of-living increase in food purchases which has hit all families during the past few years, the military officer's family has had an additional cost-of-living increase of 5 per cent for food.

The existence of the commissaries, moreover, frequently is cited by members of Congress as a reason for withholding adequate pay relief to members of the Armed Forces. Some feel that a one-time benefit is now almost a liability.

The same situation exists with regard to the post exchanges. At one time, the military officer could purchase practically all requirements for his family at reasonable savings. Now, as a result of persistent attacks, the post exchange in many instances is little more than a soda bar and newsstand.

Prior to World War II and for a time afterwards, young men contemplating a military career could weigh post exchange and commissary benefits against the acknowledged fact that their pay would be less than that received in comparable civilian employ. These benefits no longer are effective counter-balances. At the same time, military pay has fallen even further out of line with remuneration for employment in civilian life.

Family Life Hit

Young men considering a military career in the past recognized, of course, that demands of the Service would require periods of separation from families, but they could also plan for considerable periods of relatively normal family life in quarters on bases in the U. S. and at many points overseas.

The acute housing situation now in existence at practically every military and naval base in the United States has meant extraordinary family separations. Months and months ago, the Secretary of Defense suggested that, although Wherry Housing was a big help, consideration should be given to use of public funds for construction of some family quarters. To date, there has been no concrete action on this proposal.

As a result of the housing shortage, military officers if not frequently sepa-

The Navy and Air Force joined the Army in Armed Forces Day ceremonies at Ft. Ord, Calif., in which the post was dedicated as a permanent Army installation. rated from families, are forced to pay high rents or buy a house under pressures which deny them the opportunity to make careful investigations. Sudden transfers often mean substantial losses because of similar pressures in selling.

This current penalty of military Service is aggravated because of the fact that stability of assignment has been upset by the world situation during recent years, notably since outbreak of hostilities in Korea.

Short tours are unavoidable under present day conditions and military officers are aware of the necessity of sudden shifts, but they also are aware that this situation means a substantial loss of earnings and a consequent lowered standard of living.

Dependent Care Threatened

The problem of adequate medical and dental care for dependents has improved somewhat since Korea, but Service families will not quickly forget that just prior to the outbreak of fighting the Department of Defense itself was trying to curtail dependent care, already limited by shortages of doctors, dentists, and facilities.

Service families are well aware also that certain powerful interests have not given up in their efforts to eliminate dependent medical care. Therefore, military personnel are particularly disappointed because there has been no action during the present Congress on long-pending legislation which would insure adequate dependent care. As long as this benefit remains in jeopardy—and now that the Armed Services' large antagonists are on the alert—the availability of dependent care cannot be held out as a certainty to career personnel.

The current session of Congress, it had been hoped, would do something constructive on the housing and dependent care problems, but adjournment without action on these matters now seems certain.

Honor Heroic Chaplains

Unveiling service for the Window of the Four Chaplains, a stained glass window honoring the four Army chaplains who gave their lives aboard the ship SS Dorchester 3 February 1943, was conducted at the U. S. Military Academy's Post Chapel on Sunday, 25 May.

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) John I. Rhea, Deputy Chaplain, First Army, presented the memorial window to Maj. Gen. Frederick A. Irving, Superintendent of the Academy, on behalf of the Chief of Chaplains. Guest preacher was Dr. Daniel A. Poling, one of America's outstanding clergymen and father of one of the four Chaplains memorialized in the window.

The four chaplains who courageously sacrificed their own lives after the ship was torpedoed off the coast of Greenland carrying a full load of troops and equipment were: 1st Lt. George L. Fox, 1st Lt. Alexander D. Goode, 1st Lt. Clark V. Poling, and 1st Lt. John P. Washington. Two were Protestant chaplains, one was Roman Catholic, and one Jewish.

QM Property Disposal Office Makes Money

The Quartermaster Property Disposal Office at Ft. Benning, Ga., is the Army's right hand when it comes to saving money.

But this office not only saves money, it also makes money for the Army by selling used items.

"We try to save in some way on every item turned in to this office," says Maj. Leon Forney, officer in charge.

Wooden boxes picked up around the post are available to the units for packing and crating and can be obtained at a saving of $4 or $5 a box over commercial prices, according to Forney.

All worn-out linen items turned in to the Disposal Office are converted into rags. Approximately 2,000 pounds of rags from these items are turned back to Ft. Benning troops weekly. The estimated saving resulting from this process is $800 a week, Major Forney says.

Scrap turned in to the Disposal Office results in a saving also, said Major Forney. A piece of copper bar stock, three inches by one-fourth inch by seven feet, can be obtained from the Disposal section for as little as $3.12. The same size of copper bar is priced at $21.19 if bought on the market.

There also is a saving on lumber for small jobs, he explained. A load of lumber is approximately 2,000 board feet, and the cheapest is priced at $100 per 1,000 board feet. The Disposal Office has sufficient lumber available for small construction jobs at no cost.

This office also resells egg cases and vegetable hampers. If the items are clean and have not been used for garbage, egg cases bring 11 cents and the hampers 46 cents.

Tin cans are sold to an approved detinning company for reclaiming. These cans normally bring $22 a ton, and approximately 50 tons are sold each month.

Major Forney also reported that as soon as a crane and other equipment becomes available to the Disposal Office an estimated 200 tons of scraps can be picked up in the field for as little as $2 a ton.

President Visits USNA

President Truman visited the U. S. Naval Academy last week-end, reviewed the Brigade of Midshipmen and watched from the stands as Navy defeated West Point 3-1 in a baseball game.

Traveling to Annapolis on the Presidential yacht Williamsburg, Mr. Truman was greeted on his arrival by Secretary of the Navy Dan A. Kimball; Admiral William M. Fechteler, Chief of Naval Operations; Vice Adm. Harry W. Hill, the Academy Superintendent; and Governor McKeldin of Maryland.

At the Worden Field parade ground, the President received full military honors and reviewed a dress parade of the 24 companies of Midshipmen. Later, at a luncheon in his honor, he reprieved all Midshipmen who were being punished by directing Admiral Hill to wipe off all unserved punishment still on the books. He was loudly cheered by the Academy classes.

During the luncheon, Mr. Truman recalled that he had attempted to get into the U. S. Naval Academy 50 years earlier, but had failed the physical. He said he "had a flat eyeball and couldn't see." Prevented thus from following a career in the Navy, he said he had to go into other lines of work: "Among other things, I went into politics," he told the Midshipmen, "and you see where I ended up."

The President also gave the Midshipmen some advice on leadership. "In order to be a successful leader," he said, "you must learn about people, and how to live in harmony and co-operation with others." He said a leader is "the man or woman who can persuade people to do what they ought to do and which they sometimes don't do without being persuaded." He told the Midshipmen, "there is always a dearth of leaders."

In addition to the ball game, the President also witnessed the track meet which Army won 69-2/5-61-3/5. He missed the Army-Navy golf match, which Army won, 4-3. Mr. Truman threw out two balls, one with each hand, to open the baseball game. Later he handed out awards for the winners in the track meet.

In his after-luncheon talk, the President reminded the Midshipmen that their graduation day, 6 June, will be a "deeply significant" date, the tenth anniversary of Midway. Following his remark about "a dearth of leaders," Mr. Truman said he had noted that both Annapolis and West Point had always managed to train an immense number.

Distribution Box Boats

Award of contracts for construction of 13 Distribution Box (L-type) Boats was announced by Rear Adm. Homer N. Wallin, Chief of the Bureau of Ships.

Contracts were awarded to the John H. Mathis Co., Camden, N. J., which will build seven of the boats, and the National Steel and Shipbuilding Corp., San Diego, Calif., which will build six of the boats.

Total cost of the construction including delivery to destination and central procurement services will be approximately $115,000 per vessel. This figure does not include centrally procured material at an estimated $25,000 per vessel, or government furnished material.

The craft to be built are 64 feet long, with a beam of 18 feet and displacement of 50 tons. They are steel-hull craft, used for laying mines, cable, and other harbor defense underwater equipment.

Navy Offers Internships

The Navy has announced that it will make 176 Naval Hospital Internships available to medical school students who will graduate in 1953. All applicants, the Navy said, would be received and processed in accordance with the plan for internship appointments of the National Interassociation Committee on Internships.

Prospective Navy interns must meet all requirements for a commission in the Medical Corps, U. S. Naval Reserve, and must serve a minimum of 24 months of active duty, commencing on the date they start the intern training.

AGC Is 177

The 177th anniversary of the founding of the Adjutant General's Corps, one of the oldest in the Army, was observed by members of The Adjutant General's Office at a party at Ft. McNair last night, 30 May.

The Adjutant General, Maj. Gen. William E. Bergin, and Mrs. Bergin and some 200 officers assigned to duty with The Adjutant General's Office and their wives, attended.

The anniversary date of the Corps is 16 June, for it was on that date in 1775 that the Continental Congress, in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, made their resolve that there be an Adjutant General of the Continental Army. Horatio Gates, Esq., who had been a major in the British Army and had served in Braddock's expedition, was selected by ballot the following day to fill the post, with rank of brigadier general.

While the first Adjutant General was a general officer, as is the present incumbent, the office has been held by all other grades, including ensign, or third lieutenant. Among the distinguished officers who have served in the position are Lt. Col. Alexander Macomb, later Commanding General of the United States Army; Brig. Gen. Zebulon Montgomery Pike, explorer of the southwest, discoverer of the peak in Colorado which bears his name, and hero of the Battle of York, now Toronto, Canada, where he was killed leading his victorious troops; Col. James Gadsden, hero of the War of 1812, the Florida, Seminole Indian and Mexican Wars, who, as United States Minister to Mexico, completed a treaty with that country by which the United States acquired the territory known as the Gadsden Purchase; and Col. Samuel Cooper, who was Adjutant General of both the United States and the Confederate States armies.

Maj. Gen. Bergin

Maj. Gen. Gaines Retires

Troops of Brooke Army Medical Center paraded 29 May in a retirement review honoring Brooke Army Hospital's retiring Commanding General, Maj. Gen. Arthur R. Gaines, who has spent the 35 years of his medical career as an Army officer.

While four battalions made up of troops from his own command, from Hq. Brooke Army Medical Center and from Medical Field Service School passed before the reviewing stand, the grandstand on MacArthur Field between Second Battalion and Annex III was filled with the staff of the Hospital, General Gaines' many friends from civilian circles and the patients of Brooke Army Hospital whose welfare has always been his major concern.

His has been an individualized and personal command. Patients and duty personnel of the hospital are known to him by name and their treatment and problems are always of concern to him. In addition to his regular and formal rounds of inspection, he pays many a friendly and informal call on wards or in sections where people are working for the patients.

Entering duty during World War I, General Gaines served in Europe for nearly two years with the American Expeditionary Force. He returned to serve for five years in his first stateside duty assignment at Station Hospital, Ft. Sam Houston. Stateside and foreign duty filled the years between two World Wars. During World War II, he commanded Ft. Ord Station Hospital, and McCaw, Madigan and Percy Jones General Hospitals. In 1946, he went to Manila, P. I., as Commander of the 10th General Hospital at Ft. McKinley and Medical Consultant for the Philippine-Ryukus Command. He came to Brooke Army Hospital in January 1949 as Commanding Officer and within five months received the star of a brigadier general and less than a year later reached his present rank of major general.

6th Army Finance Officer

Col. Stephen B. Elkins, Assistant Chief of Finance since 1949, has been assigned as Staff Finance Officer for the Sixth Army, with headquarters in the Presidio of San Francisco. As Assistant Chief of Finance, he has been charged with program management of the Finance Corps.

Colonel and Mrs. Elkins have two children. Their daughter is Mrs. Lawrence C. Radford, wife of Lieutenant Colonel Radford, now a student in the Medical Field Services School, Ft. Sam Houston, Texas. Their son, Stephen B. Elkins, Jr., is with the American Express Company in Darmstadt, Germany.

Gen. Crichlow Chief Umpire

Brig. Gen. Robert W. Crichlow, Jr., USA, who arrived in the European Command recently, has been named Chief Umpire for the EUCOM portion of the 1952 Fall Maneuver. General Crichlow served as Army Secretary of the Research and Development Board in Washington, D. C., from March, 1948, until ordered to EUCOM.

UNITED STATES ARMY

Push-Button Range

Brig. Gen. Guy S. Meloy, Jr., USA, Infantry Center commander, fired the first shot last week to open officially the new push-button range at Ft. Benning, Ga.

The Army's first completely electronically operated rifle range, it is named in honor of Lt. Albert B. Simpson, who won the Distinguished Service Cross in World War I.

The $100,000-plus experiment, built by a New Jersey electronic engineering firm under the auspices of the Weapons Department of the Infantry School, has 36-man-sized targets which rise and fall electrically when a bullet pierces electrified sheets of screen inside the target. Both movements are executed by a small motor.

Lt. Col. John J. Williams of the Weapons Department and project officer for the new range, said that the electronically controlled targets will "save manpower, increase range efficiency and put more realism in firing exercises."

Heretofore, at least $130,000 was spent yearly to operate the range manually. Infantry School troops, who formerly were used as manual operators for the targets, will now be able to use that time for training purposes.

"Training efficiency will be increased as much as 20 per cent, and more students can be put through range firing in a fraction of the time now used," Colonel Williams declared.

Simpson Range will save in material as well as manpower. Self-sealing rubber surfaces on the targets will allow an estimated 1,500 bullets to puncture each square inch without harming the target's electronic system. Targets, which cost about $12 each, will be replaced only once every six months.

Simpson Range is a transition-type firing range whose 36 targets pop up at various distances to give riflemen practice in hitting quick-action human movements.

Four of the targets also will move laterally to simulate a man's running motion.

The new range will use only 10 controllers who will flick switches to raise targets. Manually operated ranges are staffed by about 60 men who stand in pits and raise targets by hand and lower them when riflemen score hits.

On the new range, shooters will have from 30 to 60 seconds to hit the target before it drops automatically.

If a hit is scored, the bullet punctures a wire-mesh screen, short-circuits the target's electrical system and forces it to disappear.

Lights on the control panel will enable controllers to credit firers with hits.

Director of Instruction

Col. John M. Hightower has been named The Infantry School's director of instruction at Ft. Benning, Ga.

He replaces Lt. Col. Harold B. Ayres who is scheduled to attend the Command and General Staff College at Ft. Leavenworth, Kans.

Colonel Hightower served as executive officer and secretary to the General Staff of the Far East Command from 1948 to 1951. Before coming to Ft. Benning, he commanded the 32d Infantry Regiment, 7th Infantry Division in Korea from July 1951 to February 1952.

USMA June Week

Maj. Gen. Frederick A. Irving, Superintendent of the U S Military Academy, announced this week that Secretary of the Air Force Thomas K. Finletter will deliver the graduation address at the annual West Point exercises on Tuesday, 3 June.

This year's graduating class will include 528 Cadets representing all of the 48 states, Hawaii, the Philippines and Alaska. There are also graduating cadets from Bolivia and Peru.

The Academy's colorful June Week program opened Friday, 30 May, with a concert by the U. S. Military Academy Band in the theater there.

The first of the June Week Parades was held on that day with a full dress review on the The Plain including presentation of drill streamers to the companies which won the drill competition held in each regiment. The opening day concluded with Cadet Hops in Cullum Memorial Hall for the graduating class and in the East Gymnasium for the other classes.

The Saturday June Week schedule includes a full dress review and presentation of athletic awards at 10:30 a. m.; a lacrosse game with the Mount Washington Club of Baltimore and a baseball game with Fordham University in the afternoon; and cadet hops in the evening.

Sunday's schedule is packed with activities. The traditional baccalaureate services will be held in the Cadet Chapel at 9:00 and 11:00 a. m.; in the Catholic Chapel at 8:00 a. m.; and Jewish Services in the Old Cadet Chapel at 11:00 a. m. At 3:00 p. m., the Superintendent's annual Reception for the graduating class, their parents and friends, and the alumni, will be held on the lawn of the Superintendent's quarters. At a full dress review on The Plain at 5:30 p. m., military and academic awards will be presented to the members of the graduating class. At 7:45 p. m., the Cadet Glee Club will present its June Week Concert in the natural amphitheater at Trophy Point. In the event of rain, this concert will be held in Cullum Memorial Hall.

The high point of the pre-graduation activities occurs on Monday, 2 June. This day includes ceremonies in honor of the alumni and of the graduating class. Alumni memorial services are held in the various chapels in the morning. At 11:00 a. m., Alumni Exercises are held at Thayer monument with the entire Corps of Cadets and all present alumni participating. The oldest alumnus present will place a wreath on Thayer Monument. At 11:30 a. m., the Corps of Cadets will pass in review in honor of the alumni. The annual alumni luncheon and meeting of the Association of Graduates will be held in Washington Hall at 12:15. The highlights of the day, however, in spite of the stirring alumni activities, are graduation parade at 5:00 p. m., followed immediately by recognition; and graduation hop in the evening.

The graduation exercises on 3 June are held in The Field House. The ceremonies start at 10:00 a. m. with the diplomas being presented by the Superintendent. Immediately following the graduation, the colorful and traditional West Point weddings begin. Nearly 80 weddings will take place at West Point on graduation day and the two following days.

Heads Military Institute

The Board of Regents of the New Mexico Military Institute has announced the appointment of Lt. Col. Charles F. Ward as Superintendent to succeed Col. E. L. Lusk, who will retire 1 July.

Colonel Ward, who is principal of the Institute's High School Division, has been a member of the NMMI faculty since 1926. He holds B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Texas, and is a candidate for a PhD degree from American University, Washington, D. C. Colonel and Mrs. Ward who reside in Roswell, have three children, Lt. Charles Ward, Jr. USA, Cadet Lt. George Ward of NMMI, and Mrs. Tom L. Pearson of Brookhaven, Miss.

NOW FOR THE ARMED SERVICES IMPROVED RELIABILITY FOR ALL ELECTRONIC EQUIPMENT

5-STAR TUBES

5-Star types now are available for all these tube requirements:

Here are sixteen General Electric 5-Star Tubes that step up dependability of your equipment and cut sharply the need for tube replacements. A big majority of sockets can be filled from these types, which are in volume production and available now. Still others are on their way. Stock 5-Star Tubes for your replacement needs!

Present electronic equipment can be upgraded in dependability in most cases by substituting 5-Star types when you replace standard tubes. With few exceptions, 5-Star Tubes are directly interchangeable with their older prototypes.

New electronic equipment will come to you more reliable in operation, far easier to maintain, when General Electric 5-Star Tubes are included in the design.

Ask for complete information about G-E 5-Star Tubes, designed, built, and tested for assured performance and long life! Tube Department, General Electric Company, Schenectady 5, New York.

Special Weapons Project

Regular and Reserve Navy Line Officers with either education or practical experience in ordnance, electronics, electricity, or physics may apply for duty in the Armed Forces Special Weapons Project, the Navy announced this week. Reserve officers must have had college physics and/or mathematics and be college graduates. Normal tour of duty in this program is from two and one-half to three years.

Officers selected will receive from four to six months' training at Sandia Base, Albuquerque, N. Mex. Applications should be addressed to the Chief of Naval Personnel. Officers who do not hold permanent commissions or rates in the Regular Navy must agree to serve for a minimum of two years in the program after completion of their training.

Classes in Naval Justice

The Navy has announced that classes at the Naval School of Naval Justice at Newport, R. I., will convene on the first Mondays of July, September, November, January, March and May. The school offers instruction to officers and enlisted personnel in courts-martial law and procedure under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Lasting seven weeks, the course also covers fact-finding bodies and administrative matters relating to discipline. Classroom instruction is interspersed with practical work.

Officers are taught Naval judiciary proceedings, pleading, and the rules of criminal evidence and their courtroom application. All officers, regulars and reserves, on active duty, are eligible to attend. The course for enlisted personnel concentrates on the training of legal yeomen and personnel men.

Ships of the Fleet

USS BORIE—visited the Naval Academy 9-12 May and was open for general inspection. The 3,000-ton destroyer is commanded by Comdr. W. H. Mack. Her Exec is Lt. Comdr. John C. Hill, son of Vice Adm. Harry W. Hill, Superintendent of the Academy.

Destroyer Division 72—Arrived on the West Coast on 11 May after eight months' continuous action in Korea. The destroyers HANSON, TAUSSIG and MacKENZIE make up the group. The latter is the flagship of Capt. Charles F. Phillips, division commander. Commanding officers of the ships are: MacKENZIE, Comdr. Joseph A. Houston; HANSON, Comdr. William J. Henning; TAUSSIG, Comdr. Joseph M. McDowell.

USS YUMA—Arrived in Pearl Harbor after completing her second tour of Korean duty. Commanded by Lt. R. J. Reynolds, the vessel has operated as a unit of Fleet Logistic Support Force and periodically as a unit of the Western Pacific Minesweeping Group and West Coast Korea Blockading and Patrol Element while in the Far East.

USMC Aviation

"History of Marine Corps Aviation in World War II," by Robert Sherrod (Combat Forces Press; $6.50).

Coincident with the celebration last week of the 40th year of Marine aviation, the Combat Forces Press published the first authentic, all-inclusive history of the Marine air arm.

Written by Mr. Robert Sherrod, the 422-page book, History of Marine Corps Aviation in World War II, chronicles not only the role of Marine aviators in that conflict, but tells of the origins of Marine aviation, of its first stumbling steps, its meager operations in the early years, its almost thwarted efforts in World War I, and its "between wars" activities.

The first two chapters of the book, although they take up only 33 pages, contain some of the most interesting material. Here is related the development of the Corps' air support of ground troops. There are accounts of the first organized dive-bombing attacks. One meets on these pages and in succeeding chapters many young officers now serving in top billets of the air arm.

No Unit Overlooked

In large part, the book is devoted to the war years. Marine air action from 7 Dec. 1941 to 2 Sept. 1945 has been carefully researched, not only from official U. S. sources (Army, Navy and Air Force, as well as Marine) but from Japanese documents and interrogations as well. Seemingly, no individual or unit which contributed in even the slightest way to the Marine Air War has been overlooked by Mr. Sherrod.

Readers not connected with Marine Aviation may wish that some of the really excellent anecdotal material contained in the voluminous footnotes had been included in the story proper. Marine aviators, on the other hand, will glory in Mr. Sherrod's ability to weave even the most minute details into an already complex narrative. Those who criticize other war books for not including enough about "my outfit," will find little to condemn in this author.

Pacific Battles Told

Beginning with Wake and Midway, each of the Pacific battles as they affected Marine Aviation are related with dramatic power and intensity. The reader feels the helplessness of Marine aviators who, with their out-moded craft, are pitted against the then-superior Zero of the Japanese. He rejoices with them when they achieve victories despite this handicap, and he applauds excitedly as they receive better and better aircraft and equipment with which to do their job.

One of the most surprising aspects of the book is the discovery that Marine air support of ground troops played a relatively small part in Marine operations during World War II. In the chapter devoted to Bougainville, Mr. Sherrod points out: "Except for limited employment at Peleliu and Iwo, this was also the last time Marine aviation supported ground troops until the final battle of the war, at Okinawa." The evolution of the close support technique, however, is interestingly portrayed through firsthand accounts of its use, including both its virtues and its shortcomings.

Many Photographs

Sixty-four pages of photographs are contained in the book, as well as numerous maps and charts, and dozens of excellent line drawings by Col. Donald L. Dickson, USMC.

Profits of Post Exchanges financed publication of the book and these funds will enable the Marine Corps Aviation History Board to present a copy of the book to all Marine aviation personnel who won a battle star in World War II or to their survivors.

Gen. Cooley Heads Wing

Brig. Gen. Albert D. Cooley officially assumed command of the Third Marine Aircraft Wing during colorful ceremonies at the new Marine Corps Air Station, Miami, on 19 May. He is the first commanding general of the reactivated Third Marine Air Wing, which was recommissioned on 1 Feb.

General Cooley was welcomed by Col. W. L. J. Bayler, who was relieved as commander of the Third Wing, and Col. T. G. Ennis, station commanding officer. Colonel Bayler is now assistant Wing commander.

The ceremonies began with the official reading of the orders and an informal address by General Cooley to the officers and men of the Third Marine Air Wing and spectators. The new commander stressed the important job that has to be accomplished in readying the Wing for combat duty and explained that the organization is quite fortunate in having a great place like Miami in which to train.

Following the address, the inspection party, which included General Cooley, Colonel Bayler and Col. Freeman W. Williams, inspected the officers and men of the Third Wing. The ceremonies were concluded with the traditional parade in review.

General Cooley, a veteran of more than 31 years of Marine Corps service, was born in Billings, Mont., on 11 Oct., 1900. He enlisted in the Marine Corps as a private in April, 1921, and was commissioned after graduation from the Officers' Basic School at Philadelphia in July 1925.

In 1929, he became a Naval Aviator after completing a course of instruction at the Naval Air Station, San Diego, Calif.

As a Lieutenant Colonel in May 1942, General Cooley organized and commanded Marine Air Group 14 of the First Marine Air Wing. The group participated in the Guadalcanal campaign where the general won the Navy Cross. Prior to his present post, General Cooley was Assistant Director of Marine Aviation at Marine Corps Headquarters.

our veterans is to care for those who have disabilities resulting directly from their service to their country. Financial assistance to veterans with non-service-connected disabilities, on the other hand, should be put as soon as possible on the same basis as financial assistance payable to the non-veterans of our population.

"World War II left us with over 19,000,000 veterans. World events since then mean that hundreds of thousands more will be added each year. At the same time, we have expanded and perfected our social-security laws so that they now protect most of our people. The consequences are obvious. Thousands upon thousands of veterans and their families have entitlement to Government payments under both laws. This is confusing, wasteful, and, to many people, hard to understand."

One of the pension bills signed gives small percentage increases to veterans and their dependents, both in the service connected and the non-service connected categories. The other measures increases the limitations on independent incomes which veterans and their dependents can have and still draw VA payments. The old limitations were $1,000 for veterans without dependents and $2,500 for veterans with dependents or for a widow with children. The new law raises these limits to $1,400 and $2,700, respectively.

at ELECTRIC BOAT

Research and development never cease at Electric Boat. New designs, better materials, more efficient methods are constantly being put to the test.

A result of this continuing program is PT 809, shown above. A prototype still in the experimental stage, she is of all-aluminum construction, 98 ft. l.o.a.—a sharp departure from the 80 ft., mahogany-hull Elco PTs of World War II fame.

Many other dramatic developments are taking place at Electric Boat, where we are devoting our energies to perfecting advanced naval craft and airplanes for our country's defense.

erences to forcible screening and rearming of prisoners. He did not know the exact contents of the letter to the prisoners in its final form.

General Matthew B. Ridgway, USA, who was in command in the Far East at the time the Kojé incident occurred, told the Senate Armed Services Committee that when he heard that the prisoners had made certain demands as the price of General Dodd's release he issued orders that no reply was to be made. However, the negotiations had already begun prior to receipt of the general's instructions.

Unofficial reports from Korea indicate that a board of officers which investigated the Kojé episode recommended a lesser punishment for Generals Dodd and and Colson than demotion from their temporary general officer rank, but that General Clark had recommended sterner action, and the Department of the Army approved this recommendation.

AF Personnel Planner

Brig. Gen. Morris J. Lee, who has commanded Headquarters Command, USAF, with headquarters at Bolling Air Force Base, since October 1950, will be transferred to Air Force Headquarters at the Pentagon in mid-June where he will be director of personnel planning.

General Lee will succeed Brig. Gen. Harlan C. Parks, who will leave Washington to assume command of the 3275th Air Force Indoctrination Wing at Parks Air Force Base, Pleasanton, Calif.

During World War II, General Lee commanded a B-29 Bomb Group in the Pacific where he flew 150 combat hours. He has been awarded the Legion of Merit with One Oak Leaf Cluster, the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Soldiers' Medal and the Air Medal.

A flier with 21 years' experience, General Lee won his wings at Kelly Air Force Base, Tex., a year after his graduation from the United States Military Academy at West Point. Three years' experience as a Wright Field test pilot qualified him to fly gliders, helicopters, fighters and bombers.

Since World War II, he served as deputy chief of staff of the Military Air Transport Service, chief of staff at West Point and as a member of the strategic plans group of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. In July of 1950, he graduated from the National War College.

General Lee, who is the son of Mr. Preston D. Lee, of Hoquiam, Wash., and his wife, the former Miss Lois Burgh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Burgh of Chicago, are presently living at Bolling Air Force Base with their four-year-old son, Roger.

Loyola AFROTC Unit Victor

For the second time in two years, the Air Force ROTC of Loyola University has won the Air Force Association-Lockheed trophy for academic and drill field achievement.

In the presence of more than 500 Air Force ROTC cadets from six Southland colleges and universities assembled at Spaulding Field, UCLA, the AFA-Lockheed trophy was awarded on 17 May to the Loyola group by Maj. Gen. William M. Morgan, USAF, commanding general of the Western Air Procurement District.

Competition for the trophy was among the Air Force ROTC units of UCLA, USC, Occidental, Caltech, Loyola and San Diego College. Each unit was judged on its home grounds for scholastic achievement and drill by five visiting AF-ROTC colonels from competing colleges. The judges' reports were sealed and turned over to James McDivitt, California wing commander of the AFA, master of ceremonies at the formal presentation at Spaulding Field. He announced Loyola as the winner.

AF Boxing Champs

The following Air Force personnel will participate in the Final Olympic Qualifying Boxing Tournament at Kansas City 14-16 June as a result of their winning in the AF Boxing Championships at Lackland AFB, Tex., this month:

A/B Jesse Herrea, Lackland AFB, Flyweight.

A/1c Ricardo Martinez, Stewart AFB, Tenn. Bantamweight.

A/3c Arthur Guglielmelli, Lackland AFB, Featherweight.

A/B Donald Ward, Sheppard AFB, Tex., Lightweight.

A/2c Thomas Davis, Sampson AFB, NY, Light-welterweight.

A/2c Eldon Long, Keesler AFB, Miss., Welterweight.

A/1c Eugene Cooper, Amarillo AFB, Tex., Light-middleweight.

A/1c Earl Gray, FEAF, Middleweight.

S/Sgt. John Stewart, Hamilton AFB, Calif., Light-heavyweight.

A/1c J. B. Reed, Travis AFB, Calif., Heavyweight.

Judo for SAC Men

Defensive judo is being installed as part of the physical conditioning program at all Strategic Air Command bases.

Dual objectives of the judo program are to teach SAC combat crewmen self defense if they have to escape and evade in enemy territory and to allow air policemen to overcome odds they may come up against without having to use clubs or guns.

The program started several months ago when carefully screened air police and physical conditioning personnel of SAC attended the famed Judo Instructor's School and were taught defensive judo while on temporary duty at Yokota AFB, Japan.

The judo program will not be limited to air police and combat crewmen, but will be open to all SAC personnel when they attend physical training periods.

SAC officials who sanctioned the addition of judo to the physical conditioning program were quick to point out that they are not interested in having personnel learn the offensive phase of the intricate Japanese sport. They are primarily interested in seeing that men of SAC learn an additional art of self defense if they are ever caught in a situation without weapons.

Ask DFC for Roscoe Turner

The Senate committee on Armed Services has reported favorably on a bill (HR 696) to authorize the President to present the Distinguished Flying Cross to Col. Roscoe Turner. The report states:

"Colonel Turner served during World War I in the military forces, but the merits which justify the enactment of this bill are all predicated upon his activities as a civilian in civil aviation subsequent to World War I.

"Colonel Turner spent the greater part of his life in the development and improvement of aerial science in America. He has won the Thompson Trophy race on three occasions; on three occasions he placed third in the Thompson Trophy race; he won second place in the Speed Division of the MacRobertson International Air Race; he has placed first, second, and third in various runnings of the Bendix Transcontinental Air Race, and is the only person who has placed in all three positions in that race; and, he has broken the transcontinental air-speed record on seven separate occasions.

"Much of his success in this field is attributed to the research and studies in aviation matters which Colonel Turner conducted at his own expense."

Promoted to W.O. at Lackland

Fourteen master sergeants have been given temporary promotions to the grade of warrant officers (W-1), according to word received at headquarters 3700th AF Indoctrination Wing, Lackland AFB, Tex.

The 14 new "masters" are: Edward L. Hall, James A. Carroll, Herbert E. Rothwell, Harold M. Mosher, Jack A. Pryor, William F. Amis, Roy H. Burbank, Jay W. Knowles, William R. Smith, Charles A. Shelton, Claude D. Glass, Henry B. Grumppack, Robert L. Northcutt, and Michael Mishke.

Inspect Equip. in Korea

Lt. Gen. Earle E. Partridge, USAF, Commanding General of the Air Research and Development Command, James H. Doolittle, civilian advisor on development matters to the Chief of Staff of the Air Force, and 10 members of General Partridge's staff departed for Korea by air 25 May from Baltimore, Md.

General Partridge and Mr. Doolittle wish to see how present Air Force equipment is operating in Korea, what changes should be made in it and what new equipment may be required. They agree that this information may be obtained best from the units using the present equipment.

General Partridge and Mr. Doolittle are old friends, having served together in the U.S. 8th Air Force in England during World War II. Mr. Doolittle, now a Lieutenant General in the Reserve on inactive duty, was commander of the 8th Air Force while General Partridge was its deputy commander.

At the outbreak of hostilities in Korea, General Partridge was Commanding General of the U.S. 5th Air Force in Japan and took it to Korea.

In addition to being a special civilian advisor on development matters to the Chief of Staff of the Air Force, Mr. Doolittle is a vice-president of the Shell Oil Company.

They will be accompanied to Korea by members of General Partridge's staff who are specialists in various research and development fields.

One group of specialists will return to the United States with information concerning requirements in their respective fields, while the other group will remain in the Far East for three months to continue gathering data for the Air Research and Development Command and to provide technical assistance to units in that area.

Members of the staff from headquarters in Baltimore who will accompany General Partridge are: Brig. Gen. L. I. Davis, Director of Armament; Col. J. R. Holzapple, Deputy for Strategic Air in the Office of the Assistant for Operational Readiness; Col. W. N. D'Ettore, Director of Equipment; Col. H. J. Sands, Jr., Assistant to Deputy for Development for Air Logistics and Training; and Captain C. S. Haigler, Assistant for Air Transport in the Office of Assistant for Operational Readiness.

The group which will accompany General Partridge and remain in the Far East temporarily are from the Air Research and Development Command's Wright Air Development Center, Wright-Patterson AFB, Dayton, Ohio. They are: Col. Elmer W. Richardson, Acting Chief of the Aircraft Branch, Weapons System Division; Major Marvin E. Kay, Chief, Tactical Bombing Branch of the Armament Laboratory; Major Merle H. Culp, project officer for the B-29 and B-50, Weapons System Division; Major Jerry F. Randack, Jr., Operations Office, Equipment Laboratory; and Capt. Donald R. Scheller, Armament Laboratory.

Named Air Division C.O.

Brig. Gen. Delmar T. Spivey, USAF, Commanding General, Japan Air Defense Force, has named Col. Curtis R. Low to command the 39th Air Division (Defense) in northern Japan.

Colonel Low will replace Col. Boyd Hubbard, Jr., who returns to the United States for assignment to the National War College, Washington, D. C.

Colonel Low, who commanded fighter and fighter-bomber wings in Korea during 1950-51, has been Deputy for Personnel at Hq., JADF, since last December. He will be replaced in that position by Col. Leigh Hunt, who recently arrived in the Far East following duty with the Deputy Chief of Staff, Materiel, in Washington.

June Airmen Promotions

The Air Force has authorized promotion of 43,800 airmen during June and has stated that in the future airmen promotion quotas will be allocated on a bi-monthly basis.

Approved for June were the advancement of 700 to master sergeant, 1800 to technical sergeant, 6500 to staff sergeant, 15,800 to airman first class and 19,000 to airman second class.

British Land-Air Warfare Schools

By RONALD W. CLARK

Former British war correspondent and writer on military affairs

BRITAIN'S School of Land/Air Warfare, specializing in teaching new methods of close support between the various Services, attracts many officers from outside the country. The United States has liaison officers attached to the Commandant's staff, while roughly a fifth of the students come from overseas.

The school has existed since 1921. Originally known as the Royal Air Force School of Army Co-operation, it was largely concerned with various methods by which aircraft could provide information for the ground and naval forces. More than 23 years later the School was re-organized under its present name, its scope broadened, and its aim altered to include the teaching of the science of army/air operations in its widest applications.

Today the School consists of the headquarters at Old Sarum near Salisbury in Southern England and three instructional wings which deal respectively with air defense, offensive support and transport support. It holds nearly 30 intensive training courses every year attended by army, navy, and air force officers from many countries.

Inter-Service Cooperation

Typical of the inter-service integration encouraged is the fact that the Commandant is an R.A.F. officer, Air-Vice Marshal L. F. Pendred, his assistant is an Army Brigadier, and his deputy assistant a Royal Navy commander. The same principle is carried out throughout the School, and naval ratings, R.A.F. aircraft-men, and Army privates are all employed on various administrative duties.

The provision and staffing of courses, each of which requires weeks of high-level study and "paper-planning," is the main task of the School of Land/Air Warfare but is by no means its only task. Recently, for instance, it sent a small team of officers to provide air defense courses in Norway and Belgium. Similar teams have also been sent to Malta, Gibraltar, and the Middle East, while lecturers outline the various problems of army/air co-operation to Service colleagues and schools. In addition, observers frequently attend tests of new equipment which will eventually be used in army/air co-operation and also the principal joint service exercises.

Air weapons demonstrations are frequently given at nearby ranges—the aircraft being drawn from various Commands and not attached to the School. It is then that students see in practice the application of the principles they have been studying.

Land/air warfare courses dealing with offensive and transport support are held for officers up to the rank of Wing Commander and for equivalent ranks in the other two Services, while air defense courses are held for officers up to the rank of Air Commodore. More senior officers occasionally attend those courses.

Three-day visits to discuss specific problems of land/air warfare are also occasionally made to the School by such senior officers as Rear-Admirals, Major-Generals, and Air-Vice Marshals. Special lectures are also given to ground liaison officers whose special task is to work "in the field," and to ensure hour-by-hour co-operation between land and air forces.

Radar Control Bombing

In the early days, air assistance was largely confined to reconnaissance in its various forms. Today, aircraft also play a direct and important part in amphibious assault and in the land battle while the problems of close support arising from this are studied and demonstrated at the nearby Larkhill ranges.

Ask any Officer about Uniforms by 'LAUTERSTEIN'S'

San Antonio, Texas

Live ammunition and bombs are used to show what close air support can be given to ground forces by the use of the most modern scientific equipment. Various "Pathfinder" techniques and medium bombing under radar control are two of the methods which have recently been demonstrated.

The dropping of airborne troops from aircraft or by the use of gliders, the dropping of supplies and equipment, and the "snatching" of gliders from the ground—a method used for the evacuation of wounded—are some of the other matters studied.

The School at Old Sarum, however, does not confine itself to providing courses for Regular officers. The part which it plays in Britain's growing defense plans is wider than that, and Territorial week-ends and the provision of a Territorial land/air warfare course are two of the many indications of this.

Build Lighters and Barges

Contracts amounting to $4,500,000 for construction of 66 lighters and barges have been awarded to ten companies, the Navy announced this week.

The small craft, to be used by Army Transportation Corps and the Air Force, include six 110-foot lighters for the Air Force. Forty-eight 110-foot steel cargo barges, four 120-foot refrigerated barges, and eight 235-foot steel gasoline barges will go to the Army.

Five of the firms receiving contracts are located on the West Coast; three are

—the Douglas Skyknight

Designed and built for Navy carriers, the Douglas F3D Skyknight provides our fleets with round-the-clock protection. Attack, patrol, reconnaissance, or escort, Skyknight can handle them all.

Aided by its radar eyes, the Skyknight can search out distant targets 24 hours a day. The pilot of this unique two-man, twin-jet, long-range fighter—guided by his radar operator—comes in on targets with split-hair accuracy . . . to hit with both rockets and bullets. And although Skyknight approaches sonic speeds, its hydraulic flaps can slow it down for combat maneuvers or carrier landings. The carrier-based F3D Skyknight, now in volume production, is typical of Douglas leadership in aviation. Planes that can be mass-produced to fly further and faster with a bigger payload is the basic rule of Douglas design.

"We have learned from experience that while it may be expensive to maintain a strong National Defense, it is much more expensive not to have one."—PRESIDENT TRUMAN.

Can Lost Ground be Regained? The actions of Congress in progressively reducing the attractiveness of careers in the Armed Services can be corrected and further damage prevented.

It is true that Congress has been nibbling away at the benefits and prestige formerly accruing to personnel of the Armed Services and that it has refrained from acting on needed and recommended legislation. In fact, the watered-down and tardy version of the cost-of-living pay increase is virtually the only legislation it has passed conferring any benefits on Service personnel. Articles in THE JOURNAL have been summarizing the adverse actions Congress has taken—and they are many and startling in total.

However, the fact that these actions were taken piecemeal, each virtually on the spur of the moment, such as in the form of amendments to appropriation acts, indicates that the members were actuated more by emotion than by reason. We do not believe they indicate a genuine anti-military feeling, but rather that they express a pique against many things—against the war in Korea, against the need for high appropriations and high taxes, against the administration, against the requirements of Selective Service, etc.

The remedy, it seems to us, is for the Department of Defense to institute a comprehensive study, perhaps by a group of outstanding civilians, of the decline in benefits and prestige and the effect it is having upon getting and keeping career personnel. The study should show what has been lost, how efficiency may be endangered, and what should be done to remedy the situation. With the facts assembled and a program of recommendations backed officially by the Department and an independent study, we believe Congress, particularly after the November elections, will be willing to hear the case and to develop therefrom a sound slate of legislation to relieve the pressure upon those patriotic citizens who are making the Armed Services their career and to make easier the way of those temporarily taken from their civilian pursuits to help rebuild our forces.

CinC Visits Academies. President Truman visited both the U. S. Military Academy and the U. S. Naval Academy last week. He joked with the cadets and midshipmen; he pardoned all those currently under punishment; he spoke seriously of the world situation and the part the young officers will play in it—but most of all he demonstrated to the nation the confidence and faith he reposes in these fine old institutions and the reliance that he, as Commander in Chief of the Armed Services, places upon the Academies to produce leaders for our future protection.

A Salute to MATS. Tomorrow, 1 June, marks the fourth anniversary of the establishment of the Military Air Transport Service—the first unified operation organized as a result of the National Security Act of 1947. Although a major command of the U. S. Air Force, MATS is, in fact, a joint operation employing not only Air Force personnel, but flying, ground, and administrative personnel from the Navy and Marine Corps as well. Its outstanding accomplishments, including the great Berlin airlift thrust upon it 24 days after its organization, as well as the current enormous airlift in support of the war in Korea, have demonstrated its efficiency and What of the Regulars?

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Since the military expansion following the outbreak of the Korean War I have heard a great deal of criticism of the operation of the Army. To avoid futile argument let us assume that all the current shortcomings are the result of policies established by Regular Army Officers.

Public derogation, reduction of authority, official mistrust, and a general lessening of prestige certainly will not attract the type of man who can improve the situation. Notice that I do not include such items as lowered standards of living, reduction of benefits, lack of housing, reduced commissary and post exchange facilities, and all the other complaints of inequality of treatment so commonly heard, as I believe that patriotism and the satisfaction in doing a responsible job well override these uncomfortable annoyances.

I do not pretend to be able to come up with an adequate solution, but I am able to report my feelings on the matter. I am forced to question my value as a young Regular Army Officer by the bitter criticisms of Congress, The Press, the various reserve components, and the American public in general. Perhaps I could be of more value to my country in a respected civilian occupation? I know that I would be far happier in an occupation which had public approval than in one which drew only bitterness.

I ask the civilians I serve for their advice.

Commission EM

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

As a Regular Army wife, I was very interested in your article in the 17 May issue regarding the critical need for career officers in the Armed Forces.

It would appear that the Joint Chiefs of Staff are missing a good bet by not investigating some of the Regular Army top three grades who are unable to apply for commissions because of age restrictions. Many of these men have 15 or 20 years before retiring and are presently more than qualified to serve in a commissioned status, thereby saving the government the expense of training them as such. So many of the young men going through OCS these days remain in the Army only a limited time and are definitely not the career type soldier.

What does the Army offer people like my husband? He has a fine education, once held a Reserve commission, but can not now reinstate it because of age-in-grade requirements. He wants to stay in the Service for a career, being now a sergeant first class. Although he has 23 years before retirement, he is faced with the knowledge that he can only better himself by promotion one grade higher.

He has been and still is consistently rated "superior" by his various commanding officers, who include majors, lieutenant colonels and colonels. He has the educational and physical requirements of an officer and is apparently only held back by red tape, including the requirements of age in grade.

Surely this is not an isolated case—there must be literally hundreds

Pontiac passenger cars, in whatever proportion the needs of the times may demand. In the event of stepped-up defense production the greater portion of the space now contemplated for automobile assembly could be converted to aircraft manufacture in a matter of days. Conversely, if the need for military aircraft declines, most of the space now given to aircraft production could be converted to use for automotive assembly.

This "dual purpose" system does away with the alternate opening and closing of peace and war plants, and the consequent dispersal of and seeking of skilled workers, as the needs of the times change. Instead, the same plant swings from one production line to the other with a minimum of upset to the workers and the community and the maximum of efficiency and production to the industry and the nation.

10 Years Ago—

Cooperating with the British Royal Air Force and the China National Aviation Corporation, the (American) Ferrying Command has assisted in bringing out of Burma by air several thousand soldiers and civilians. Of a total of 8,616 evacuated by air, the Ferrying Command brought out 4,228.

NON-COM'S WIFE

EM Allowance Hit

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

The "Four-Fourteen" cost of living pay increase just passed by Congress is indeed a welcome relief, as far as it goes, for us members of the Armed Forces and our families.

However, the apparent inadequacies and discriminations effected by this legislation have not been wholly brought forth by your publication. It has been noted that the 14 percent increase in subsistence and rental allowances has been stated exactly as such in all articles encountered by me including your own editorial in the 17 May JOURNAL.

The text of this Act states that, "The basic allowances for subsistence as provided in Section 301 (e) of the Career Compensation Act of 1949, except the amount payable to enlisted persons when permission to mess separately is granted, is hereby increased by 14 percentum." This grants enlisted personnel no increase in subsistence. In all, it grants personnel in the first pay grade with over ten years service an increase of only 5.45 per cent.

Since it is readily apparent that the cost of living has increased for everyone, by the same percentage, this portion of the Act should be immediately amended. This additional increase in subsistence would almost make this pay-rise worthwhile.

Newspaper editors are according considerable space to analysis of the West German peace contract, particularly as regards the reaction of Soviet Russia.

The Baltimore, Md., Sun tells its readers that "a signed peace contract and a signed European army treaty . . . will not by any means constitute a final settlement of the German question. Rather, the affixing of the last signature to the second document may well signal the beginning of the tensest period to date in the East-West struggle for Europe."

The Philadelphia, Pa., Inquirer counsels that "no matter what the Reds reply, experience warns us to match their long-term strategy with patience, pluck and power."

"Especially power," stresses the Inquirer. "We will be secure only as long as we are strong."

The New York Herald Tribune maintains that "the West . . . has taken a soundly realistic view of Europe's future," and adds that "the three powers have pointed up the sharp differences between their own concept of human liberty and progress and the dark ambitions of the Kremlin."

According to the Washington, D. C., Star, "the time has come to make clear to the men of the Kremlin that if they want a showdown—on the German issue—or any other issue—they can have it. They should be told in unmistakable terms that force will be met with force."

The New York Times put it this way: "The extent to which the Russians really believe that the West is aggressively planning the rearmament of Germany with a view to war instead of peace is impossible to gauge, but should not be underestimated." The Times adds that "the possibilities in-involved cannot be allowed to restrain the West, whose own survival depends on building up a strength that cannot be made adequate without Western German participation. We all embark today on a perilous road," The Times concludes, "but one that must be followed. In reality, there is no choice."

New Chief at SHAPE

SUPREME Allied Command in Europe has passed this week from the hands of General Eisenhower to General Ridgway with expected smoothness.

Temperamentally different from his predecessor, the new chief at SHAPE brings to his task those soldierly qualities which the mission calls for, and some admirable experience of a semi-diplomatic nature, which will serve him well in Europe as it has served him well on previous occasions—as a junior officer on Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy's Latin-American missions of the "Twenties," as a commander of mingled forces in Europe, and latterly as the top Allied commander, first in Korea, and then in Japan. He will have as his chief of staff—General Alfred M. Gruenther, who started the organization of SHAPE before General Eisenhower took the command, and who will prove as nearly indispensable to his new chief as he has been, this past year-and-a-quarter to the first SACEUR.

The staff and the several sector commands are firmly set up, the troops are better placed than ever before in relation to their supplies and their missions and are vastly better trained as well as more numerous. One phase of the west's rearming is passed and another begins, with a new commander.

Not wholly by coincidence the passing of this personal command phase is accompanied by a momentous turnover in another respect. For the week has brought to reality two things for which General Eisenhower has been a prime worker—the contractual agreement between the three western powers and Western Germany and the compact for the prospective European Defense Community—West Germany, France, Italy, Belgium, Netherlands and Luxembourg. The first agreement was initialed at Bonn on Monday by the four foreign ministers, the second on Tuesday in Paris by the representatives of the six states. They were inseparable, for what was given in the one case was conditioned on what was taken in the other. Both are epochal, and both are exposed to the troubles which normally mark an epochal event. In this case, Soviet Russia has been an angry and a threatening opponent, for reasons which need no exposition. Moscow's threats have not been wholly ineffective either, for while they have not deterred Chancellor Adenauer from signing both documents, they have undoubtedly stirred in the German minority either a fear of Russian reprisal against West Berlin or a nationalist worry that this action may tie the Bonn government more closely to the West than some of the nationalists wish. France, too, has its minority which a week ago was so powerful as to persuade the French cabinet to do its own threatening of parliamentary opposition unless Britain and America gave sufficient guarantee that West Germany would not be allowed to walk out of its European Army commitments. This Parisian demand for guarantees came dramatically on the eve of the meeting of Messrs. Acheson, Eden, Adenauer and the surprised Schuman; it was disposed of by a reminder of the very considerable pledges previously given (not by parliaments to be sure) of British and American concern over the projected status quo. The signing proceeded therefore in the dramatic manner planned, and a momentous decision was taken. It still must be ratified by the several national legislative bodies (including our own) and that is months in the future.

It is against this background of world events and attitudes that Congress has chosen to deal with those budget items which are concerned with Europe's future—the rearming of America itself and the aid to European and other friendly powers whose own program for rearming is necessarily keyed to the assistance they will receive from this country. It is not the first time that American internal political exigencies have intruded most unfortunately on world requirements. With allied nations prepared to do considerably more than in the past toward the west's rearming, and with Russia imposing plain threats against it, this is an unhappy time for America to diminish its aid and thereby to feed the fears, rather than the courage, of Allies whose fullest assistance we will some day need. When the tumult of the mid-year political circes dies down, we are likely to learn that it was this situation, as much as any other, which induced General Eisenhower to transfer his great persuasive powers west of the At-

Panmunjom Propaganda Funnel for Reds

KOREAN truce talks were resumed on Tuesday, 27 May, at the neutralized village of Panmunjom after an unusual three-day weekend recess, but with no indication that they would be any more fruitful in the future than in the past. At the first session this week the Red delegation threatened retaliation for alleged Allied mistreatment of war prisoners. Enemy radio broadcasts this week confirmed, if any confirmation were necessary, that the Panmunjom armistice conference is being used almost solely as a vehicle for the dissemination of anti-American Communist propaganda. Apparently the Reds were surprised and angered by the revelation that more than half the prisoners of war and interned civilians in Allied hands would forcibly resist attempts to return them to Communist control. In a desperate effort to divert attention from this shocking intelligence the propaganda organs in all Communist countries, the press, the radio, and the Red delegation to the Panmunjom conference are making concerted charges that the Allies, particularly the Americans, are guilty of inhuman treatment of war prisoners.

Investigation of conditions at the Koje Island prison camp tends to support the belief that instead of the prisoners receiving harsh treatment the reverse is true, that the recent trouble at Koje was a direct result of far too lenient treatment. Reports from Korea, supported by testimony given by General Matthew B. Ridgway, USA, before the Senate Military Affairs Committee, disclose that only a relatively small military guard was on duty at the prison camp, because it was believed inadvisable to withdraw adequate numbers of troops from the fighting front for such an assignment. It is now conceded that a few weeks ago the many thousands of prisoners, even though unarmed or crudely armed, could have acted in unison to break out of their enclosures and take control of the island.

FOLLOWING THE CAPTURE of Brig. Gen. Francis T. Dodd, USA, by the Koje Island prisoners and his subsequent release prompt steps were taken to strengthen greatly the prison guard. American, Australian, Canadian, and Dutch troops were sent to Koje, with tanks, artillery, and other equipment, in sufficient numbers to suppress quickly and effectively any attempted Communist uprising. One reason for adding troops of other nationalities to the American guard was to make it clear to the prisoners and to the enemy that the control of Communist prisoners is not an exclusively American function.

However, the use of Canadian troops for this purpose was promptly protested by Ottawa. In a sharp note to the State Department Foreign Minister Lester Pearson indicated the displeasure of his government that a contingent of Canadians had been detached from the British Commonwealth Division to act as prison guards, without prior consultation with Canada. He expressed the hope that this duty would be of a temporary character.

Dispatches from Korea reveal that during the past several months there have been occasional unreported prison riots, and that numerous prisoners have been tortured and murdered by inmates because of their renunciation of Communism. Prison hospital records show 415 prisoner deaths at Koje, 115 resulting from prisoner-of-war brutalities, 122 from gunshot wounds, and the remainder from natural causes. General Ridgway told the Senate Committee that a number of prisoners had been strangled to death, possibly by hanging, by their fellow-inmates. In a five-day riot in one enclosure at Koje last September, not heretofore announced, a fierce battle between Communists and anti-Red prisoners resulted in 100 casualties, including 15 killed. United Nations guards, suppressing the disturbance, wounded 14 with gunfire and 22 with bayonets. In another previously unreported riot, which occurred on 10 April, four South Korean guards and three North Korean prisoners were killed and 57 Reds were wounded.

FURTHER TROUBLE IS EXPECTED at Koje where prisoners are reported to be improvising crude weapons, and obviously preparing for renewed rioting. However the United Nations guard force is well prepared for any eventuality. Communist flags are still flying in some of the enclosures, in defiance of orders issued by Brig. Gen. Haydon L. Boatner, USA, new commandant of the camp, but many others have been hauled down. Several tunnels leading from a prison enclosure have been discovered and blocked. It is not known whether any prisoners fled through them, but the Peiping radio reported the escape of three Red prisoners from Koje, saying they had been the victims of gross brutality. It was suggested at the Senate hearing that the prison riots may have been inspired by Communist leaders for the purpose of forcing the Allies to divert more troops from the front to handle the situation, and thus weaken our defenses. General Ridgway agreed that such a theory was plausible.

During his testimony before the Senate Committee, which was made public only after much had been deleted for security reasons, General Ridgway was asked by Senator Wayne Morse (R-Ore.) whether it was his "opinion and judgment that it would be, from a military standpoint, unwise to continue or attempt an offensive up to the Yalu River." The general replied, "Very definitely and very positively." Further testimony along this line was omitted from the published transcript for security reasons. The discussion of this subject was of particular interest because of the apparently different strategic concept of General Ridgway from that of his predecessor, General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, who had ordered the advance to the Yalu which was repulsed by the influx of hordes of Chinese Reds from Manchuria.

ANOTHER APPARENT DIFFERENCE of military opinion between the two generals was noted when Senator Morse asked General Ridgway if it was his belief that the bombing of Manchurian bases would greatly increase the danger of bringing Russian air forces into the Asiatic war. General Ridgway replied, "In my opinion it would." General MacArthur had advocated the bombing of these bases.

While agreeing that final settlement of the Korean War was largely dependent on political decisions of the United Nations, General Ridgway said that he had formulated a definite plan for future military operations in Korea. Details were not included in the transcript of the general's testimony, but there were indications of considerable off-the-record discussion of the matter. Several senators said they preferred not to have detailed information of the plan itself, but wanted to be assured that careful consideration was being given to future military operations designed to end the war.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Navy Nurse Decorated—Lt. Comdr. Estelle E. Kalnoske Lange, NC, USN, Assistant Chief Nurse, Naval Hospital, National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., has been awarded the Bronze Star Medal for meritorious achievement in connection with operations against the enemy in Korea. The award was presented by Rear Adm. B. Groesbeck, jr., MC, USN, Commanding Officer of the National Naval Medical Center.

Lieutenant Commander Lange, as Chief Nurse of the U. S. Naval Hospital aboard the USS Consolation provided outstanding nursing service to the sick and wounded, the Navy said.

Mrs. Lange resides with her husband, Capt. George A. Lange, USN, at 2439 Monroe Street, N. W., Washington, D. C. Captain Lange is Commanding Officer of the USS Glynn.

Retires After 41 Years—A retirement parade honoring Brig. Gen. Pearson Menoher, USA, until recently deputy post commander, was held on 28 May at Ft. Bragg, N. C. He will leave the Army today after 41 years of service.

General Menoher plans to spend much of his retirement hunting and fishing. He and Mrs. Menoher have purchased a residence in Southern Pines, N. C.

Navy "Infantrymen"—Sixteen officers from the Navy Civil Engineer Corps School at Port Hueneme, Calif., are undergoing infantry training at Camp Roberts, Calif., an Army installation. The concentrated 10-day course is aimed at making the Navy men familiar with basic infantry tactics and weapons.

Industrial Power of Canada & U. S.—An interesting discussion of the joint responsibility of Canada and the United States in the maintaining of peace and security was given by Mr. John Jay Hopkins, chairman and president of the General Dynamics Corporation (formerly the Electric Boat Co.) in a recent address delivered to the Canadian Manufacturers' Association in Quebec. Mr. Hopkins is also chairman and managing director of Canadair Limited, Montreal.

"It is then not presumptuous or fatuous to say," Mr. Hopkins told members of the Association, "that upon the businessman industrialist of North America, strong because of the free enterprise system in which he operates and the God-given wealth of human and natural resources with which our two countries are blessed, has fallen the grave responsibility for preserving human freedom in this time of great and immediate danger!"

"This responsibility is twofold. The first I have already indicated. Our industrial machine must be kept strong, sound and flexible. It must be able to provide, promptly upon call, for many years hence, weapons of war in numbers and variety that will give any aggressor pause. At the same time it must be able to supply the day-to-day needs of our civilian economy at a rate that will enable us to control inflation and keep the Politburo waiting a long, long time for the 'inevitable collapse' to which its members look forward so eagerly.

"The second part of our responsibility as businessmen is in some ways the more difficult for us to fulfill. It is the responsibility of protecting the free enterprise system which all history demonstrates is the foundation of our industrial strength....

"Our sole hope of survival—the sole hope of survival of the free world as we know it—lies in our cooperation in the preservation of our liberties at home and in the building of an industrial machine that will assure the armed forces of the United Nations overwhelming superiority in arms and equipment for an indefinite period and at the same time will supply adequate amounts of goods for our steadily expanding civilian needs. I have faith that we can accomplish this task."

Tripler Senior Navy Nurse—Lt. Comdr. Dorothy Bogdon, NC, USN, has reported to Tripler Army Hospital in Hawaii for duty as Chief Navy Nurse. Lt. Col. Pauline Kirby, NC, USA, is Chief Nurse.

War In Korea—End, Beginning?—An Army officer who wrote the terms of surrender for Japanese forces in Korea at the end of World War II and who later saw action in the current Korea conflict recently was given a new assignment. Col. Willis A. Potter is the new Judge Advocate at the Brooke Army Medical Center, Ft. Sam Houston, Tex.

As Judge Advocate of the XXIV Corps, he wrote the surrender of Japanese forces in Korea. The capitulation came a full week after the surrender of the Japanese officials in the ceremony abroad the USS Missouri. When the Korea conflict began in June 1950, Colonel Potter was on duty with General Headquarters, Far East Command.

EUCOM MSTS Change—Capt. Forest R. Bunker, USN, has relieved Capt. James R. Topper, USN, as commander of the Military Sea Transportation Service with offices at European Command Headquarters in Heidelberg.

Captain Bunker, who recently arrived in EUCOM has served as Chief of Staff to the commander of MSTS, Pacific Area, for the past two years. Captain Topper, MSTS commander at EUCOM Headquarters since 28 Feb. 1951, will report to Seattle, Wash., where he will serve as commanding officer of the North Pacific Sub-Area.

Now Post for Col. Surles—Col. Alexander D. Surles, jr., has been named assistant to the Army Headquarters Commandant, Military District of Washington, in the Pentagon.

Son of the Army's Director of Public Relations (1941-45), the late Maj. Gen. A. D. Surles, USA, he resides at 3313 Connecticut Ave., N. W., with his wife, the former Miss Ella Bryden, daughter of Maj. Gen. William Bryden. The couple have two children, Barbara, 12, and Thomas B., 10.

First HAFSE Wedding—Army Sgt. Charles R. Ray became the first serviceman assigned to Headquarters, Allied Forces Southern Europe to be married in Italy when he took Miss Assunta D'Acerno, of Naples, for his bride. The couple celebrated their wedding with a reception last Saturday, 17 May, on the sunlit terrace of the fashionable Restaurant D'Angelo situated high above the Bay of Naples.

Sergeant Ray's father is a retired Navy Chief Petty Officer.

EUCOM General Staff Secy.—Lt. Col. Frederic W. Boye, jr., has been named Secretary of the General Staff, EUCOM Headquarters. Assistant Secretary to the General Staff since last December, he succeeds Col. Howard M. Snyder, jr., who has taken command of the 6th Armored Cavalry Regiment.

Assigned Ordnance Post—Col. Edwin A. Smith, Deputy Chief of the European Command Ordnance Division since July 1950, has been assigned to the New York Ordnance District, New York City, and will leave EUCOM the first week in June for the United States. His successor in the EUCOM Ordnance post has not yet been named.

Named Arsenal C. O.—Brig. Gen. Thomas K. Vincent, USA, will leave Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., during the week of 1 June. Deputy commander of the Proving Ground and chief of the Ordnance Training Command, he will take command of Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Ala., in mid-June.

Upon General Vincent's departure and until the return of the post commander, Maj. Gen. E. E. MacMorland, USA, currently on an inspection tour of Ordnance installations in Europe, the acting post commander will be Col. Willis R. Slaughter.

Colonel Slaughter will arrive next week from Sixth Army Headquarters, The Presidio, San Francisco, to take command of the Ordnance School when Brig. Gen. Waldo E. Laidlaw, USA, current School commandant, leaves in mid-June for the Ordnance Ammunition Center, Joliet, Ill. Colonel Slaughter is Ordnance officer for Sixth Army.

Ground Test Turbine 'Copter—The jet-powered XH-17 helicopter built by Howard Hughes' aircraft company for the Air Force moved out of its hangar at Culver City, Calif., on 24 May, for a series of ground tests prior to a first flight.

The XH-17 is powered by two modified General Electric turbojets supplying gas pressure through ducts leading up the rotor shaft and out to the tips of the long rotor blades. It is designed for short-range moving of heavy military equipment including artillery, tanks, bridge sections and trucks.

Quits U.M.T. Post—Brig. Gen. Harry H. Semmes, USA-Ret., has resigned as executive director of the National Security Training Commission, according to an announcement by Dr. Karl T. Compton, chairman. The fate of the Commission is now up to the Senate, for the House, in passing the 1953 appropriations bill, eliminated funds for continued operation of the U.M.T. advisory unit.

Signal Lab Posts

Two combat veterans recently returned from overseas have been named directors of Signal Corps Engineering Laboratory divisions at Ft. Monmouth, N. J.

Named new head of Evans Signal Laboratory in West Belmar is Col. Loren E. Gaither, past chief of the EUCOM communications branch. New director of Squier Signal Laboratory is Col. Ralph

D. McKinney, formerly signal officer for the Alaskan Army Command.

Colonel Gaither will supervise work in applied and nuclear physics, radar, meteorology, thermionics, and counter-measures.

Colonel McKinney, as director of Squier Laboratory, is in charge of research and development in photography, components and materials, frequency control, power sources, and chemical-physics fields.

Weddings and Engagements

MAJ. Gen. Orlando Ward, USA, and Mrs. Ward, announce the engagement of their daughter, Ada (Robin), to Mr. George Kenneth Yates of Arlington, Va.

Miss Ward attended the Madeira School in Virginia, graduated from the Kent School in Denver, and later, from Colorado College. Mr. Yates is a graduate of Harvard and is with the Engineer Research and Development Laboratories at Ft. Belvoir, Va.

Mrs. Leslie Tibbetts Odell, daughter of Col. Ralph E. Tibbetts, USA-Ret., and Mrs. Tibbetts, of 3918 Moseley Dr., Columbus, Ga., was married, on 19 May to Maj. John Gillespie Hill, Jr., USA, (USMA '46), at the Chapel of Trinity Episcopal Church, Columbus.

The bride is the widow of Lt. Fenton McGlachlin Odell, (USMA '49), who was killed in action in Korea in 1950. Parents of the bridegroom are Col. John G. Hill, Deputy of the Organization and Training Div., G-3, Department of the Army, and Mrs. Hill.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of blush nylon tulle over blush satin, designed with a fichu neckline and an illusion yoke, and an ankle-length bouffant tiered skirt scattered over with clusters of blush valley lilies. With this, she wore a halo of blush tulle caught at one side with matching valley lilies. Her bouquet was an old fashioned nosegay of gardenias, blush roses and stephanotis. Miss Joycelyn Hill of Washington, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor and the only attendant. Colonel Hill served his son as best man. The groomsmen were Capt. Herbert J. McCrystal, Maj. Paul Fletcher, Maj. William Fulton, Capt. Alvin C. Hadley, Capt. John Osteen, Capt. Shepherd A. Booth and Lt. William Dunn.

Colonel and Mrs. Tibbetts were hosts at a small reception at their home, following the ceremony.

Mrs. Hill was graduated from Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., and attended the University of Chicago and the University of Alabama. She is a member of the Delta Gamma sorority. Major Hill served three years in Germany and Greece, and one year in Korea, where he was the recipient of the Silver Star and two Bronze Stars. He has recently completed the Advanced Officers Course at the Infantry School, where he graduated as No. 1 man in his class. He has been assigned to ROTC duty at Boston College, Boston, Mass., where he and his bride will reside.

The First Methodist Church at Athens, Ga., was the scene of the marriage, on 17 May of Miss Katie Ruth West, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Prescott West, and Mr. Edward Van Meter Macatee, Jr., son of Col. E. V. Macatee, USA, of the Quartermaster Depot, Richmond, Va., and Mrs. Macatee.

Before the altar banked with smilax, palms, white gladioli, snapdragons and chrysanthemums, Dr. Dow Kirkpatrick performed the ceremony. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown designed with a bodice of Chantilly lace, its tulle scalloped yoke outlined in seed pearls and sequins, and its satin skirt ending in a chapel train, with an overskirt of matching lace falling into a point at the back. Her fingertip veil was caught to a Chantilly lace Juliet cap embroidered with pearls and sequins. She carried a bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley centered with an orchid. Mrs. Ernest P. West, Jr., was matron of honor for her sister-in-law, and the bridesmaids were the Misses Josephine Benton, cousin of the bride, Nannie Lee Dial and Marie Townsend, with Marilyn West, niece of the bride, as flower girl. Mrs. Charlie Thompson was best man and the groomsmen included the Messrs. James Parker and Louis Price, cousins of the bride, and Steve Wood and Stuart Capers.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. West were hosts at a reception at the Club House of the YWCA.

The bride attended the University of Georgia as did the bridegroom. Mr. Macatee is a veteran of two years with the Army in France.

The young couple will make their home at Augusta, Ga.

Miss Rose Marie Staus, daughter of Mrs. Andrew Staus of New Rochelle, N. Y., was married on 10 May at the Holy Family Church, New Rochelle, to Mr. Matthew James Finn, son of Mrs. Matthew E. Finn of Washington, D. C., and the late Captain Finn.

Mr. Michael V. Staus escorted his niece. She wore a gown of candlelight satin trimmed with Chantilly lace and carried a bouquet of Eucharist lilies and lilies-of-the-valley. Miss Barbara Staus, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Best man for Mr. Finn was Mr. J. Bernard Wychoff of Amherst, Va. The ushers were the Messrs. C. Richard Bennett of New York and Gerald R. Stebbens of Tulsa, Okla.

Mr. Finn is an alumnus of Dartmouth College and The School of Advanced International Studies of Washington. He served with the Fifth Air Force in the South Pacific. He is now with the Foreign Sales Department of the Texas Co. in New York City.

The couple will reside in Tarrytown, N. Y., upon their return from a wedding trip to the Virgin Islands.

Midshipman Dudley is a member of the USNA Class of 1953.

while serving with 8th Field Artillery Battalion, 25th Division, near Mungsa, Korea.

His battery was firing a support mission, when a fire broke out among the ammunition. Ordering his men from the area, Captain Dingeman smothered the fire with a poncho. When it spread to the camouflage net, he grabbed the flaming cloth in his bare hands and carried it from the area.

He would not allow his men to continue their mission until he had personally carried all of the smoking projectiles from the area.

His father, Col. Ray E. Dingeman, pinned on the medal. The colonel, former deputy post commander at Fort Lewis, Wash., is presently retiring after 34 years' service. He will live in Lakeland, Fla.

Capt. Dingeman is one of three brothers, all Army men. He and a younger brother are USMA graduates. His other decorations include the Silver Star, Bronze Star with "V" and Oak Leaf Cluster and the Commendation Ribbon.

■ CAMP IRWIN, CALIF. Social high point of the recent visit of Gen. J. Lawton Collins to The Armored Combat Training Center, Camp Irwin, Calif., was the reception at which officers were able to meet their Chief of Staff, Army, Corps and Post commanders at one time. The four-three-two-one star reception line consisted of Maj. Gen. William B. Kean, III Corps, Ft. MacArthur, Calif.; Lt. Gen. Joseph Swing, Sixth Army, Presidio of San Francisco, Calif.; Mrs. Macdonald; General Collins, and Brig. Gen. John C. Macdonald, Camp Irwin.

■ FITZSIMONS AFB, DENVER. Lt. Col. Inez Haynes, Director of Personnel, Army Nurse Corps, and Maj. Dorothy V. Elliott, Education Consultant, ANC, were honored at a tea recently given by nurses here. The two officers were at Fitzsimons for a four-day survey in their respective fields, as part of a national survey being conducted for the Surgeon General of the Army.

■ SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF. A regular meeting and dinner of the San Francisco Chapter of the Armed Forces Chemical Association was held 22 May at the Presidio.

Col. G. W. Dorn, Commanding Officer, San Francisco Chemical Procurement District, reviewed the current outlook in the Chemical Corps Procurement Program. Lt. Col. Patrick J. Moran, Executive Officer, Sixth Army Chemical Section, an observer at the recent atomic bomb tests in Nevada, spoke on "Desert Rock Exercises."

Benning to Have Summer Program for Children

A summer recreation program for children of military personnel will begin at Ft. Benning, Ga., 23 June and continue until 1 Aug.

The Children's School System is planning the activities in cooperation with the Youth Activities Council. Teachers in the school system will act as instructors and playground directors.

The playgrounds at Children's School Nos. 1 and 2, Custer Terrace and Benning Park, will be open Monday through Fri-

■ SEATTLE, WASH. Capt. F. J. Firth, USN, and Mrs. Firth left recently to spend his month's leave in several eastern cities. They plan especially to be present at Mt. Holyoke College on 2 June to witness the graduation of their older daughter, Jean, who has made Phi Beta Kappa. Their younger daughter, Mary Lee, is a sophomore at Mt. Holyoke. Mrs. Firth is president of the Naval Officers' Wives Club of the Seattle area.

Ens. Donald E. Huebner, SC, USN, who returned from duty in Korean waters, has just spent a month's leave with his parents, Comdr. L. H. Huebner (Ret.) and Mrs. Huebner at their home in Seattle. He is assigned new duty again in West Pacific waters.

■ FT. JACKSON, S. C. Native dresses of countries in the Far East and Europe, depicted an international theme for a coffee held 20 May by wives of officers assigned to the combined headquarters of the post. Mrs. W. P. Shepard, wife of Maj. Gen. W. P. Shepard, post and 8th Infantry Division commander, was guest of honor.

Native attire from countries in which the ladies have resided included Scot kilts, Japanese kimonos, Korean Yon Bon and the Viennese dress. In charge of arrangements for the program were Mrs. Arnold D. Blair and Mrs. John E. Byron.

■ BALTIMORE, MD. Capt. Andrew T. McColgan has been assigned as Public Information Officer of the Maryland Military District. Captain McColgan recently returned from a 39 months' tour of duty with the 1st Division in Germany. He takes over the post held since October 1950 by 1st Lt. John E. Rauscher, of Cincinnati, who will report to Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind., for a short course prior to his departure for overseas duty in Germany this summer.

■ LOWRY AFB, COLO. Members of the Officers' Wives' Club hospital recreation committee held a party 20 May at the base hospital for two wards of bedridden patients.

On 22 May a newcomers' coffee was held. Hostess for the occasion was Mrs. Gayle Wolfe, Spotters' chairman for the club.

■ CAMP KILMER, N. J. Mrs. Alfred M. Koster, former newspaper and magazine staff writer and the author of forty published rhymes on life in the Armed Forces, was guest speaker for the luncheon meeting of the Officers' Wives Club here 22 May.

She has appeared as guest entertainer before many Service wives' organizations in the Washington area during the past year. She is the wife of Colonel Koster, USA, G-4 of Camp Kilmer, who will leave this summer for a new assignment in the Far East.

■ OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA. Maj. Robert J. Hopkins, of Sparta, Wis., was recently appointed Director of Statistical Services at Headquarters, 33d Air Division (Defense). Major Hopkins arrived at the division headquarters on 10 May from Wiesbaden, Germany. His wife, the former Miss Mae M. Pittinger, and two children, Mary Jo and Paul, are in Sparta, Wis.

■ AUSTIN, TEX. One hundred Texas and New Mexico air reservists will brush up on their military specialties 1-15 June at the University of Texas. The brief, refresher courses will replace the Volunteer Air Reserve School conducted last year at Fourteenth Air Force Headquarters, Macon, Ga., originally scheduled for a repeat this year.

Maj. John E. Orr, director of operations and training for Third Air Reserve District, said the university schooling is one of the new methods of keeping air reservists posted on current developments within their military specialties.

■ ANKARA, TURKEY. On Tuesday, 13 May, the monthly luncheon of the Jammat Woman's Club met at Surreya's. After the delicious luncheon was served, the President of the club, Mrs. Preston B. Wooley, took great pleasure in introducing the honored guests. The following wives of leading officers of the Turkish Armed Forces were presented as guests of the club:

Mrs. Nuri Yamut, Mrs. Sahap Gurler, Mrs. Muayaffer Goksenin, and Mrs. Necati Tacan. It was regretted that Mrs. Sukru Kantil, Mrs. Kemal Bozkurt, and Mrs. Aziz Ulsan were unable to attend the luncheon. It was unanimously voted that Mrs. George McGhee, wife of U. S. Ambassador Mr. George C. Mc-

Army Navy Air Force Journal 1211 31 May 1952

Ghee, be made honorary member of the Jammat Woman's Club.

Mrs. H. C. Ziltz, Vice-President of the club, presented a very delightful program which consisted of the presentation of Hoca Stories, with the following Turkish ladies acting as characters: San Erenberk Vaking, part as The Donkey; Ayse Silay as The Student or Disciple; Leyla Kipmen as Hoca, and Nerriman Hizin known as "Ayse Abia," gave a splendid review of the acted stories. These stories were received by members and guests of the club with great applause.

■ CAMP PICKETT, VA. Col. George R. Evans of Louisville, Ky., has been appointed Assistant Chief of Staff and Personnel Officer of Camp Pickett. A veteran of the Mexican Border Campaign and both World Wars, Colonel Evans comes to Camp Pickett from Europe where he served with the SHAEF command.

He and his wife, the former Laureen English, currently reside at 1669 Fairfax Rd. in Walnut Hills, Petersburg, Va. They have two children, Capt. John M. Evans and Mrs. Kathryn E. Livingston.

■ FT. SAM HOUSTON, TEX. Brig. Gen. Martin E. Griffin, who will succeed to the post of Commanding General of Brooke Army Hospital upon the retirement from active duty of Maj. Gen. Arthur R. Gaines next week, is now serving as the Hospital's Deputy Commander as he acquaints himself with the varied aspects of his new assignment.

General Griffin, who reopened Percy Jones Army Hospital at Battle Creek, Mich., in Oct. 1950 after it had been closed for five months in an economy move, is a veteran of 26 years in the Army Medical Service.

Mrs. Griffin and her mother, Mrs. Nellie Hoffman, accompanied the General to Ft. Sam Houston. Eugene, the Griffins' only child, is a medical student at the University of Iowa. The Griffins reside at 174 Artillery Post, Ft. Sam Houston.

■ FT. BENNING, GA. The Netherlands Army's chief of intelligence and training arrived here last week to see U. S. Infantry training methods. Col. C. J. Volk, who was on the post three days, visited the Infantry School's Operations Office and Library and the Airborne, Automotive, Army Extension Courses, Communications and Ranger Departments. He also toured the Army Field Printing Plant and Third Army Food Service School and visited the First Officer Candidate Regiment.

Honors came double to the Gibbs brothers here. Phillip and John, sons of Captain and Mrs. John Gibbs, have been awarded Scouting's highest honor—Eagle Scout rank. Sixteen-year-old Phillip has been a member of the Scouts since 1948, while John, 15, joined a year later. Another Gibbs brother, Terry, is now a second class scout, but has ambitions to be an Eagle Scout.

■ ANTILLES HDQS., P. R. Col. Clarence H. Bragg has been appointed commanding officer of Ft. Buchanan. It was announced by Headquarters, U. S. Army Forces Antilles and Military District of Puerto Rico. He succeeds Col. Arthur E. Solem who has been assigned to Ft. Bragg, N. C.

Colonel Bragg came to Puerto Rico from Idaho, where he was Chief of the Military District, and Senior Army Instructor, ORC. During World War II he served in the South Pacific Theater as executive officer, Service of Supply.

Colonel and Mrs. Bragg has one daughter, Mrs. Julian Turner. She is the wife of Maj. Julian Turner, who is Quartermaster for the 2d Engineers Special Brigade in Yokohama, Japan.

■ TOKYO. Mrs. Matthew B. Ridgway, wife of the Commander-in-Chief, FEC, was honored at a farewell tea given by the Headquarters Women's Club at the Headquarters Officers' Club. Some 300 members were present to wish "Bon Voyage" to their attractive and charming Honorary President who has contributed tremendously to the effectiveness of the organization during the past year.

Guests were presented to Mrs. Ridgway by Mrs. H. T. Miller, the Club President. Mrs. Joseph Witherow, Jr., Vice President, and Mrs. Erwin Jones, Secretary-Treasurer, assisted. Mrs. Ridgway, always gracious and generous with her time, talked with each member as the latter was presented.

For the occasion, the entire first floor of the club was decorated with a profusion of spring flowers and the tea table which was set outside on the terrace was lavish with flowers and ice carvings of swans. Ladies in gay spring dresses and modish picture hats walking amongst the small tables placed on the lawn made a delightful picture.

Pouring at the tea table were members of the executive committee, Mesdames L. L. Williams, W. M. Ives, Jr., R. P. Wilson, W. A. Ross, P. A. Feyereisen, W. G. Hunefeld, Jr., D. K. Dukes, Jr., G. L. O'Brien and B. G. Thompson.

Heidelberg Women Have Busy Program

THE Heidelberg American Women's Club, made up largely of service wives, operates a unique service in the Heidelberg, Germany, area.

Through its membership the club offers many social and cultural events which would not otherwise be available to personnel in the area. A "Thrifty Shop" operated by the group provides finances which permit the members to carry on other welfare programs and group-help activities.

Through its welfare committee, the group distributes used and new clothing and miscellaneous items to needy Germans, refugees, and displaced persons. Working in close cooperation with the Heidelberg City Welfare Bureau, a German organization, the club selects needy families, determines their needs, and gives help to them wherever possible. During 1951, 339 families received continuous aid from the club, and 123 families or individuals were given one-time or occasional help.

The club also works with other institutions such as the Bahnhof Mission (a Travelers' Aid for women and children), which is given periodic donations of food, clothing and cash, the Wickernheim (temporary sleeping and eating facilities for transient men) which receives the same type of aid, a tuberculosis hospital for children, and schools for boys and girls.

Both new and used articles of clothing are obtained for these purposes from the German Youth Association, the club's own Thrift Shop, and from unclaimed clothing at the Post Exchange Dry Cleaners. New clothing of different kinds is also ordered from the U. S. Among the unusual items which were provided for families last year were a wheel chair for a 21-year-old crippled girl, 18 mattresses and springs, 24 chairs, four tables, and dishes for 50 families.

A monthly cash allotment is made to the German Youth Organization for which the club also provides 20 leaders who teach classes, conduct groups in play activities, and give general assistance. Similar assistance is provided for the Girl Scouts.

Social and cultural programs during the year include monthly general meetings which offered such attractions during 1951 as the Heidelberg Symphony Orchestra, and visits from a Paris fashion editor; Mrs. Perle Mesta, U. S. Ambassador to Luxembourg; and a concert pianist. Travel tours are conducted to Berlin, Vienna, Paris and local historic spots.

Book, music, drama, and sports groups, as well as bridge-luncheons, offer varied entertainment for the 375-400 members of the club. A language group, which arranged for formal study and informal conversation practice in German, contributed to a better understanding between the German and the American people.

The club believes that its work is typical of that done by American women's clubs throughout the European Theater. The members enrich their own lives while contributing to the social, cultural and community welfare interests in their area.

Obituaries

Maj. Gen. Clarence H. Danielson, USA-Ret.

Maj. Gen. Clarence Hagbart Danielson, USA-Ret, 62, died at Bradenton, Fla., on 22 May after a short illness.

A native of South Dakota, General Danielson was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1913, and was commissioned a second lieutenant of Infantry. He saw his first action in the Mexican Border campaign.

He was Director of Procurement Services, Headquarters Army Service Forces prior to assuming command of the Seventh Service Command with headquarters in Omaha, Nebr., in 1944. After leaving Omaha, he went to the Pacific Headquarters in Manila as Adjutant General.

General Danielson retired from active duty in 1946, and he and Mrs. Danielson had lived in Bradenton since 1947.

In addition to his widow, Mrs. Edith B. Danielson, he is survived by a son, Col. O. W. Danielson, USA-Ret; one brother, Mr. G. H. Danielson of Seattle; and four sisters, Mrs. Silas Townsend, Mrs. James Jelbert of Lead, SDak, Mrs. J. H. Brooks of San Mateo, Calif., and Mrs. H. D. Stier of Seattle. Burial was at West Point on the afternoon of 27 May.

Col. Frederic A. Henney, CE, USA.

Col. Frederic A. Henney, CE, USA, (USMA '24), was fatally injured, on 22 May near Smithville, Tex., under the tragic circumstances of trying to save his two young daughters, Marcia, 5, and Claire, 3, from injury while riding a horse.

After he was impaled by the pommel of the western saddle when the cinch slipped, he drove the children 18 miles to their grandmother's home in Smithville, then collapsed. Colonel Henney, who was a veteran of World War I, saw combat in World War II in North Africa, where he received two

He attended the Graduate School at Berkeley, Calif., for a year was at the University of Zurich, Switzerland, and was a graduate of The Engineer School. At the time of his death, Colonel Henney was on leave from the University of Texas, where he was PMS&T.

In addition to his two small daughters by his second marriage, he is survived by two sons, 2d Lt Frederic A. Henney, Jr., USAF, (USMA '51), presently stationed at Luke AFB, Ariz., and Alan G. Henney, who is now a student at the University of Miami.

Burial was at Smithville beside his wife, who died two years ago.

Mrs. Lillie Stanley Rumbough

Following a long illness, Mrs. Lillie Stanley Rumbough, widow of Col. David J. Rumbough, USA, died, on 22 May at her home at South Fairlington, Va. She was 90 years old.

Daughter of General and Mrs. David Sloan Stanley, Mrs. Rumbough had made her home in Washington, D. C., since the death of Colonel Rumbough in 1912. There she had taken, until recent years, a prominent part in many activities. She was a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Colonial Dames, the Barons of Runnymede, the Dames of the Loyal Legion, the Daughters of the U. S. Army and the Society of Guadalupe.

Mrs. Rumbough is survived by two daughters, Mrs. William W. West of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. T. Q. Donaldson of Tucson, Ariz.; three sons, Mr. Stanley M. Rumbough, Mr. J. Wright Rumbough, both of New York, and Col. David S. Rumbough, USA, of Washington; 12 grandchildren and 18 great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at the Ft. Myer Chapel, on 26 May, with burial at Arlington National Cemetery.

MATS Is Four

McChord AFB in Washington State to Tokyo.

Simultaneously with the military movements MATS called upon the commercial carriers to help augment the Far East airlift.

During the first two months of action 66 aircraft from scheduled and non-scheduled carriers were phased into the Pacific Airlift operations.

Since the Korean action was a United Nations effort, the Royal Canadian Air Force, and Belgium's Sabena Airlines also contributed aircraft and crews.

From 70 tons a month airlifted to the Far East prior to the Korean action to 1,800 tons three months later required the smooth integration of Troop Carrier and commercial carriers with MATS aircraft. Neither has ever presented any special problems, as all transport operations are basically very closely related.

A dramatic by-product of the Pacific Airlift is the evacuation of the sick and wounded from Japan.

World-wide air transportation of military medical patients by MATS was di-

U. S. COAST GUARD

THE Coast Guard has issued Personnel Memorandum 10-48 which describes the desire to issue orders 45 days prior to the effective date of transfer of enlisted personnel to permit adjustment of personal affairs.

The Coast Guard said the success of the program depends on early selection of personnel after receipt of transfer orders and added that selection should not be delayed more than 10 days.

It was reported that in several instances, selection and transfer of men appears to have been delayed for as long as a month. Hardships arising from the immediate departure necessary in order to conform to reporting dates indicated in such cases result in receipt of well substantiated requests for cancellation or delay in reporting dates. All districts and major units should review the processing of orders and take such steps as may be indicated to assure that selections are made within 10 days of receipt of transfer orders, the Coast Guard said.

Service Strength

The following are preliminary figures on the strength of the U. S. Coast Guard as of 30 April 1952, compared with planned strength as of 1 July 1952.

	30 April	1 July
Officers	2,931	3,219
Warrant officers	936	939
Cadets	454	350
Enlisted	30,718	30,902
Total	35,039	35,410

NSLI Dividends

The Veterans' Administration has advised the Coast Guard that due to the greatly increased workload brought on by the Servicemen's Indemnity and Insurance Acts of 1951 and the necessity of withholding dividend payments to in-service personnel pending determination of whether or not premiums on their policies had been waived, payments of 1951 NSLI dividends to service personnel have been delayed. It is now anticipated that payment of these dividends will be completed by 31 July 1952. Commanding Officers should insure that all interested personnel are so advised and are requested to withhold inquiry concerning this payment until after 31 July 1952, as such inquiries tend to result in additional delays.

rected by the Secretary of Defense on 1 August 1949.

Economy dictated the switch to complete air evacuation of the ill and wounded of the three armed services for, in evacuating patients from the Far East, MATS is utilizing what would otherwise be empty space in its aircraft after having delivered critical cargoes and high priority personnel over the Pacific.

Strategic airlift is now a two-way street.

Since the start of the Korean action to 1 June 1952 about 46,000 combat casualties and other military patients have been brought back to the U.S. from the Far East alone.

Strong arm of MATS air evacuation fleet in the Pacific is the high altitude, pressurized Boeing C-97 Stratofreighter and the Douglas C-54 Skymaster. The smaller Douglas VC-47 Skytrains are used only in the United States. A number of C-97's, C-54's and VC-47's have been, or are being, especially modified to provide more modern facilities and greater comforts for patients.

The 65-patient capacity C-97's, with two flight nurses and three or four medical technicians in addition to the regular eight-man plane, crew, can evacuate medical patients from Haneda AB, Japan to Travis AFB, Calif., in 24 hours flying time.

Late in November 1950, some C-97's began making one-stop air evacuation flights from Japan to Kelly AFB, San Antonio, Texas, in 28 hours flying time. The one stop is made at Hickam AFB, Honolulu, where patients rest at Tripler General Hospital for 24 hours before proceeding to the United States.

The 32-patient capacity MATS C-54's, and the MATS Navy R5D's, with one flight nurse, two medical technicians and a plane crew of six, are evacuating patients from Osaka, Japan in approximately 35 hours.

The mortality rate of our wounded in Korea has been less than half that of World War II. Only two out of every 100 injured fighting men in Korea may be expected to die as a result of their wounds.

In the late war, an average of 4½ per 100 wounded eventually lost their lives. In World War I, it was 8 out of 100.

Modern medical methods, plus swift air evacuation of the military wounded, have made this savings of lives possible.

MATS primary mission is to maintain a flexible air transport capacity for strategic inter-continental and inter-theater airlift. To do this, MATS maintains 110,000 miles of aerial routes from the continental U.S. to every point on the globe where American Forces are stationed and where U.S. interests lie.

During periods of emergency the strategic situation determines the routes and schedules we fly.

Although MATS has the responsibility for furnishing strategic air transport, there are other vital Services within MATS which carry a heavy responsibility to military and civil aviation.

One of the most important of these is Air Weather Service. AWS charts weather conditions on a global scale. In conjunction with other services and the U.S. Weather Bureau, AWS maintains a constant watch over all the long range aspects of weather.

The Service is able to pinpoint weather conditions for combat aviation intelligence in Korea, and for our forces—Army and Air—in Europe.

In addition to its standard ground meteorological activities and observations, AWS operates six aerial reconnaissance squadrons flying scheduled missions from strategic points around the world. One AWS squadron has maintained a daily weather reconnaissance flight from Japan over Korea since the start of the Korean action. Another has flown more than 600 flights over the North Pole from Alaska.

Other AWS squadrons collect weather data during long overwater flights from Guam, Hawaii, California, and Bermuda. The worldwide weather data compiled by AWS are correlated with observations from 117 fixed locations and more than 25 mobile units overseas, and from 146 stations in the United States. Master weather centrals first handle the data which are finally coordinated by the global AWS center at MATS headquarters at Andrews AFB, Md.

Closely coordinated with AWS on a global scale is the Airways and Air Communications Service. One of the Service's many functions is the transmission of weather data. Transmission of this information is a valuable contribution not only to the USAF and MATS but to other military services, several government agencies, the civilian economy and the civil air carriers.

A highly technical organization, AACS personnel maintain installations at nearly 200 locations around the world which provide some 1,250 facilities operating 16 different kinds of necessary communications and navigational services.

Along its communications network, AACS simultaneously may be issuing instructions and relaying information to a flight of strategic bombers; jet fighters en route to Korea or to NATO countries in Europe; transports on routine missions; jets on record-breaking runs; weather reconnaissance aircraft; or coordinating an air-sea rescue mission.

Equipment utilized by AACS technicians include control towers, direction finders, radio ranges, Grounded Control Approach (GCA), and Instrument Landing System (ILS), air-ground radio, point-to-point radio, Loran, radar beacons, facsimile, message centers and cryptocenters.

Air Rescue Service, which has performed so dramatically in the Korean action, also operates on a global scale. Since the start of the Korean conflict, men of the Third Air Rescue Squadron, the Korean unit, have saved some 865 UN personnel from behind enemy lines.

From 25 June 1950 to date the Third Rescue Squadron has evacuated more than 3,615 from behind the front lines and other nearby areas. The squadron is the most decorated of all Korean air units.

Duplicates of the Third Squadron operate under all weather conditions from strategic locations throughout the world. Their rescue facilities are available not only to U.S. military aircraft but to civil carriers. A large part of the ARS work is to intercept aircraft with engine trouble.

The Bermuda squadron, for instance, flew 14 such missions in a single month, ready in each instance to land on the ocean to rescue pilots, crews, and passengers, or to air-drop life boats when and where needed.

All ARS units are on a 24-hour alert wherever they are stationed.

Flight Service is primarily a pilots' "service" organization whose function is to assist all pilots prior to and during flight by accepting aircraft flight plans, issuing flight plan approvals, locating overdue aircraft, and setting into motion emergency procedures on lost aircraft. The facilities of Flight Service are in daily use by thousands of pilots of the Navy, Coast Guard, Army, Marine Corps, and Air Force. The plan of flight of every point-to-point military aircraft aloft over the United States is displayed on the boards of the eight Flight Service Centers until such time as it safely reaches its final destination.

MATS Is Four

Flight Service is the only one of the six MATS services which operates entirely within the Continental United States.

Air Resupply and Communications Service is a relative newcomer to MATS. Its mission is to parachute supplies to isolated units. The Service also is charged with the dissemination of psychological warfare material.

Air Photographic and Charting Service, recently brought into the MATS orbit, is responsible for the overall photographic and charting needs of the U.S. Air Force.

One of APCS's main missions is to provide all aeronautical charts and related materials required by the Air Force to fly its aircraft and to plan and execute its air operations in peace and in war. It is the only organization in the United States which has on hand, and keeps current, aeronautical charts of all parts of the world. The Service distributes five million aeronautical charts monthly.

Jet aircraft have brought new chart requirements. High-flying, high-speed flying calls for charts quite different from those used in flying conventional aircraft. These jet charts are much smaller in size and show less detail, but they emphasize electronic and other special information required by jet pilots.

In addition to its charting functions, APCS fulfills the needs and requirements of the U.S. Air Force for training films, film strips, still and motion picture coverage of combat operations for historical, intelligence, and staff study, and other special USAF requirements.

For the foreseeable future, MATS main transport mission will continue to be that of a strategic air route command. World conditions appear likely to increase the usefulness of this global air transport system operating under the direct control of USAF.

A blueprint of the maximum use of civil and military aircraft under full mobilization already has been drawn up in coordination with civil carriers.

The program known as the "Civil Reserve Air Fleet Plan," is the result of a joint agreement reached by Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett and Commerce Secretary Charles Sawyer on 15 December 1951. It calls for the immediate transfer to MATS in case of all-out war of 400 four-engine aircraft from the civil air fleet. These would be under contract to USAF.

An alternative program, detailed in the blueprint, calls for the mobilization of both aircraft and their crews into the military establishments, should the situation warrant. MATS has been designated as the executive agent of the Department of Defense to carry out the transition from civil status to militarization of aircraft and crews.

Interwoven into this concept of strategic airlift is a global air route framework containing basic route facilities, aircraft and personnel—a broad operating nucleus in being and in constant readiness for rapid expansion in time of national emergency.

This, then, is the MATS mission. The mission is a challenge to men of vision, wisdom, and faith in the future. For should attack come it will come with a startling and stunning swiftness.

Time, calculated not in weeks or months, but in days—even hours—may well decide the issue.

At such a moment, one of the first calls would be for the swift mass movement of men and material—strategic airlift; enough of it, right then, to permit our striking forces to go into full operation.

This is the eventuality for which MATS is preparing itself—24-hours-a-day, 7-days-a-week, 365-days-a-year.

lantic, for a home audience not yet fully convinced of what is needed.

The first overt action in the expected counter-effort of the Red government in East Germany, seeking to block the western nations' program, was an announcement that the so-called police forces are being "strengthened" along the border, with no immediate indication of what form the "strengthening" will take. It may be limited to an increase of the barriers to communication between East and West Germany. There is no present hint of more interference affecting West Berlin itself, but that always is a possibility, despite the Reds' uneasy memory of the days of the Berlin air-lift, when Red impudence received an impressive spanking. The one certainty is that Moscow's obedient servants will do what they can to build up, mainly by terrorism, a maximum of West German opposition to the Bonn government's program for alliance with the west. We must remember that not one of the governments concerned has yet ratified either of this past week's compacts.

Awarded AF Contract

Hagan Corporation of Pittsburgh, Pa., has been awarded a contract by the Air Force to design and construct an automatic control system for the High Altitude Engine Test Facility at the new Arnold Engineering and Development Center Tullahoma, Tenn.

The High Altitude Engine Test Facility will make possible the testing of turbo jet and ram jet power plants under simulated flight conditions of speed and extremely high altitudes. The total project will consist of a High Altitude Engine Test Facility, a Gas Dynamics Facility, a Propulsion Wind Tunnel, and the necessary Central Facilities.

Navy Buys Cranes for Army

Navy Civil Engineers announced this week that bids are being received for construction of 24 60-ton cranes, the largest service procurement, under competitive bidding, of this type of equipment in recent years.

The cranes are being bought for the use of the Army at advance bases.

The purchase is being negotiated under the single service procurement program.

The cranes are to be constructed on all-steel barges 124 feet long, 58 feet wide and 12 feet deep. Each piece of equipment will consist of a revolving truss-boom crane with self-contained diesel-electric power plant and machinery house. The barge is to be designed and constructed to permit overseas towing. The completed cranes will weigh about 750 short tons, each capable of lifting a 60-gross ton load at 73-foot radius.

Ordnance Plant Production

Military rifle and machine gun ammunition is now being produced in the first of several units at the St. Louis Ordnance Plant which are now being reactivated and operated by the United States Defense Corporation, a subsidiary of Olin Industries, Inc., East Alton, Ill.

Another Olin subsidiary, the United States Cartridge Company, operated the entire St. Louis Ordnance Plant during World War II.

Announcement of the start of production was made jointly by R. Deck Reynolds, works manager of the United States Defense Corporation, and by Maj. W. C. Vaughn, commanding officer of the government-owned plant.

Tank Engine Contract

An additional $16,500,000 to Ford Motor Company in Detroit for tank engines and spare parts was the largest Army Ordnance major prime contract awarded to Michigan industry by the Detroit Ordnance District, it is announced by Col. Paul M. Seelen, district commander.

The award to Ford was a supplement bringing the total contract to date to $40,000,000. Oldsmobile Division of General Motors Corporation also received a supplement award of $336,337.30 for the reconversion of facilities increasing their contract to $5,100,000.

A new prime award of $382,906.81 was awarded to the Wolverine Tube Division, Calumet & Hecla Consolidated Copper Co. for metal parts for percussion primers used in artillery ammunition. The balance, $1,887,509.22, were classified awards.

Air Transportability Training

Fourteen Fairchild C-82 Flying Boxcars dropped nearly 400 French paratroopers and more than three tons of fighting equipment near Rabat, French Morocco, late this month as part of the Air Transportability Training Program.

The flight of American C-82's took off from the Rhein/Main base and later picked up 402 French paratroopers at Toulouse, France. After flying over Madrid and Gibraltar, they landed at Rabat to load and drop 383 paratroopers and 6,500 pounds of fighting gear.

Actual scene of the paratroop was Mekens, French Morocco, where the operation was observed by 15,000 Arabs, French, and Americans. The show was designed to demonstrate the French fighting potential in the African colony. Arab leaders from all parts of French Morocco attended the training maneuvers and were so impressed with the drop that they requested permission to keep 14 of the recovered parachutes.

Open Helicopter Plant

Formal plant inspection of Bell Aircraft Corporation's new $7,000,000 Helicopter plant at Hurst, Tex., will be held 6 June, it is announced by Harvey Gaylord, vice president in charge of the division. The official opening comes just two weeks more than a year since groundbreaking ceremonies were conducted at the site 21 May, 1951.

Two main buildings house all of the company's helicopter activities. The administration building, a two-story structure, quarters the division's executive offices, the engineering, sales and service departments and purchasing offices.

The factory building, 320 feet by 500 feet, houses two assembly bays with ceiling clearances of 28 and 32 feet, respectively. A mezzanine containing approximately 3,600 square feet of space will be utilized by factory departments. Both buildings are completely air-conditioned as will be a company operated cafeteria to be constructed this year.

To the west of the factory building is Texas' first heliport, a 200 by 400 foot area from which the company's production and experimental helicopter models will be flight-tested.

After the guests inspect the plant, they will be served a buffet luncheon at the plant. This will be followed by demonstrations of the new plant's products, H-13D, HTL-4 and 47D-1 helicopters.

B-47B Flight Simulator

The Air Force announced on 29 May provisional acceptance of its third flight simulator—a ground training machine for the B-47B airplane made by Link Aviation, Inc.

Previously, simulators had been accepted for the B-50D bomber and the F-86D jet fighter, and under construction are other trainers for the B-36D bomber, C-124A and C-97A cargo planes.

Delivery of the new simulator to Strategic Air Command is expected in June. It is being held at the Link plant in Binghamton, N. Y., for minor adjustments and to give instruction on maintenance to Link personnel.

Acceptance of the machine was announced after it had been tested by engineers from Wright Air Development Center's Equipment Laboratory and had been "test flown" by pilots from WADC's Flight Test Division, SAC and Air Training Command.

The simulator does almost everything its airplane counterpart does except leave the ground. Costing only a fraction of the price of a B-47, it provides realistic, safe, economical, thorough and rapid training of experienced pilots in their transition to the six-jet Boeing Aircraft. Yet the device occupies only approximately 280 square feet of floor space and weighs 16,000 pounds.

Like its forerunners for the B-50D and F-86D, the B-47 simulator exactly duplicates the cockpit of the airplane itself. All the instruments found in the airplane are reproduced in the simulator cockpit and by means of servo-mechanisms they react to the simulated conditions just as they would to the actual conditions in the aircraft.

Gen. Lutes Elected

The Board of Directors of the Pacific Tire & Rubber Company, at Oakland, Calif., has elected Lt. Gen. LeRoy Lutes, USA-Ret., as President.

The Company has been reorganized and is affiliated with The Mansfield Tire & Rubber Company of Ohio. In addition to its own line of Pacific brand tires manufactured for many years it now has contracts to manufacture the Pennsylvania, Inland, Mansfield and other brands for the far Western States.

Coming to Washington, D. C., Pentagon, Northern Va.? This column has carried our ad for 6 years. During that time we have helped hundreds of the military personnel buy, sell or rent homes. We recommended buying those homes only with legitimate price tags. So far as we know none of our clients has resold at a loss. We realize coming here for the first time, you need expert, honest advice regarding prices and locations. That is a strict policy with us. We mean to continue that policy. Most of our business, now is coming through references by those we have served. We are justifiably proud of that. We want your business. We will thoroughly orientate you. We will be painstaking, and do our best to prevent you making a mistake in your houseseeking. Frequently we are able to sublet to you while you are looking around. Write, phone or contact us.
